THE WAR.

Announcement to the Reichstag of the French Declaration of War—Speech of King William—War Loan Voted Unanimously—Harmony in Germany—A Theory of the Cause of the War—A German Ultimatum, Dethronement of the Bonapartes.

BERLIN, July 20.—The Reichstag, or North German Parliament, met yesterday afternoon. The Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin was chosen President. Vehement cheering followed Count VON BISMARCK's announcement of the declaration of war by France. The King then opened the session with a speech, which was greeted with the wildest enthusiasm. He said Prussia had no interest in the selection of the Prince of HOHENZOLLERN for the Spanish throne except that it might bring peace to a friendly people. It had, nevertheless, furnished the Emperor of the French with a pretext for war unknown to diplomacy, and, scorning peace, he had indulged in language to Germany which could only have been prompted by a miscalculation of her strength. Germany was powerful enough to resent such language and repel such violence. He said so in all reverence, knowing that the event was in God's hands. He had fully weighed the responsibility which rested on the man who drives into war and hurls two great and tranquil nations, yearning for peace and the enjoyment of the common blessings of Christian civilization and prosperity, and for contests more salutary than those of blood. Those who rule France have shrewdly studied the methods touching the sensitive pride of that great neighbor nation, and to promote selfish interests have misguided it. Then," concluded the King, "as our fathers before us have done, let us fight for liberty and our rights against the wrongs inflicted by a foreign conqueror; and as God was with our fathers, so He will be with us in a struggle without which Europe can never enjoy lasting peace." ter the King's speech had been delivered, a loan of 120,000,000 thalers was carried unanimously, amid the wildest expressions of enthusiasm by all parties....The most perfect harmony exists in the Governments of all the North German States. In the Saxon Chambers yesterday, Baron DE FRISSEX, the Minister of Finances, made a speech, telling the Deputies that France was anxious for war, and that she should have it as sharply and severely as possible. His remarks were greeted with enthusiasm....It is said here that the failure of the intrigue by the Empress EUGENIE to marry her niece, the Duchess of ALBA, to Prince LEOPOLD of Hohenzollern, is the real source of the present trouble between France and Prussia. The father of the Duchess is now in Madrid, drowned in debt, and generally despised. All Germans in the service of the French have been ordered to return forthwith. The Prussian Government has announced that merchantmen, even of the enemy, will not be interfered with on the high seas, unless for causes which would expose neutrals to seizure. Gen. WIDDIN, the Adjutant-General of Hanover, has been arrested at Weimar as a spy.

FRANKFORT, July 20.—The Gazette, in an editorial, asks how the cause of the war concerns the people of France or Germany, and intimates that the question is one between the monarchs of the respective countries, and one that the people do not feel at all interested in.

LONDON, July 20.—Germany makes the dethronement of the BONAPARTES its ultimatum. A gentleman who has just returned from a trip up the Rhine, tells his experience to the Times this morning. He says the German army is quiet, grave, anxious and resolute. On the other hand, the French are yelling, drinking, swaggering, and literally "spoiling for a fight." He says further that for every one German soldier, he saw a hundred French.

Another Formal Announcement in the French Chambers—A State of War—A Sanitary Commission in Paris—Americans Active—Movements of Mr. Washburne—Rumored Italian Alliance—The Orleans Princes.

PARIS, July 20.—In the Corps Legislatif today, the Duke DE GRAMMONT announced in the following words that war had been declared with Prussia and her allies:

"Messieurs: The exposé presented to you on the 15th inst. made known the causes we have for war against Prussia. According to the rules and usage of nations and by order of the Emperor, I have requested the Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin to notify the Cabinet of Prussia of our resolution to seek with arms the guarantees we could not obtain by discussion. This has been done, and I have the honor to make known to the Corps Legislatif that in consequence thereof a state of war exists, since the 19th, between France and Prussia. This declaration applies to the allies of Prussia who give her armed assistance."

A meeting of citizens of the United States was held at the residence of Dr. EVANS last night to take measures for the organization of a Sanitary Commission. It is proposed that the Commission shall co-operate with the international and French societies in aid of the wounded. Dr. EVANS placed at the disposal of the new organization the report of the American Sanitary Commission and a collection of models of ambulances, stretchers, hospital tents and other appliances used by the Commission during the late war. A donation of 10,000 francs was also made by the Doctor as a nucleus for a sanitary fund. Mr. WASHBURNE, the American Minister, was in Bohemia when he heard news of the breaking out of the war. He immediately returned to Paris, and yesterday was in consultation with several of his diplomatic colleagues....Le Liberté asserts that M. VIENNEGRATH has gone to Florence with a treaty of alliance between France and Italy. The same paper says in case Denmark joins France in the war the Prince of Orleans will serve in the Danish Army. The warlike enthusiasm in France is unabated. A rich manufacturer of Mulhouse has offered to equip 5,000 volunteers and supply them with rations during the war. The Deputies in the Corps Legislatif sign liberal subscriptions for the wounded. M. SCHNEIDER gives 20,000 francs to one of the aid societies.

Bazaine and Mac Mahon's Campaign with "His Father"—Military Conditions of Victory—Special Changes—Consuls in Germany Leaving—Proclamations that Cut—Military Movements—The German Volunteer Uniform.

LONDON, July 20.—A special dispatch to the Times from Paris says the Empress Eugenie is delighted that the Prince Imperial will now see his first campaign with his father. M. OLLIVIER avows his entire confidence in the favorable result of the war....Telegraphic communication between France and Germany has been destroyed by the authorities.

PARIS, July 20.—An American resident here has given 10,000 francs to the Society to aid the wounded soldiers of France.... The Journal Officiel this morning contains a decree nominating Gen. EDMOND LEBEUF, lately Minister of War, as Major-General; Viscount DUJARAC, Minister of War ad interim, and Prince DE LA TOUR D'AUVERGNE as Ambassador to Vienna....It is understood that all the French Consuls in the Germanic Confederation have received their passports....No newspaper correspondents, French or foreign, will be allowed to accompany the French army.

PARIS, July 20.—It is rumored that Prince NAPOLEON will go to the Baltic and with his land force cooperate with the fleet of Vice-Admiral Count BOUET WILLAUMEZ in occupying the territory of Hanover. A number of spies have been captured on both sides near the Rhine.

COLOGNE, July 20.—The French passed the frontier, near Saarbrücken, last evening and seized the Custom-house.

No Fighting on Sea or Land—The Emperor at St. Cloud—Bismarck Complains of the Landwehr—Belgium—Spanish Condemnation of Napoleon—Swiss Neutrality.

PARIS, July 20.—No fighting on sea or land has yet been reported. The Deputies from the Departments of the Upper and Lower Rhine, Moselle and Meurthe, are kept well informed by telegraph of the movements of the army, and they state that no important conflict has yet taken place between the hostile forces. There have been some skirmishes between patrols and customs officers; but no blood has been spilled, and not a gun has been fired. The Emperor did not come to Paris today. He received the Ministers and answered dispatches at St. Cloud. The Prussians on the border say that BISMARCK is much troubled at the slowness of the Landwehr in coming forward.

LONDON, July 20.—The Belgian official organs say that France misconstrues as an evidence of hostility, the destruction of a bridge near Blandain, which was merely the result of a misapprehension of orders, and declares that Belgium remains loyally neutral. The Spanish papers unanimously condemn NAPOLEON for declaring war.

BASEL, Switzerland, July 20.—A General of the Swiss army and several other officers of high rank have been arrested in Germany. It is believed that Prussia purposely retards her answer to Switzerland's declaration of neutrality.

The French Campaign—Concentration in the North-Western Part of the Country—The Commands.

LONDON, July 20.—The following highly important sketch of the French campaign has been obtained from a reliable source. The French army is concentrating in the North-western part of the country within a quadrilat eral formed by the towns of Nancy, Thionville, Strasbourg and Mayence. South of Strasbourg, on the same meridian, is an intrenched camp at Belfont, where a corps d'armée is now taking up its position to form the right of the French Army. Another corps will be in reserve at Chalon-Surmarne. The entire army will be composed of eight corps, each consisting of three or four divisions of infantry, and from six to eight regiments of cavalry. Each division will have three batteries of artillery, one company of engineers, and will comprise from ten to twelve thousand men. The commanders of the corps are as follows:

First Corps—Maréchal MACMAHON, Duke de Magenta.
Second Corps—Baron FROUSSARD, General of Division.
Third Corps—Maréchal BAZAINE.
Fourth corps—Count LADMIRAULT, General of Division.
Fifth Corps—DE FAILLY, General of Division
Sixth Corps—Maréchal CANROBERT.
Seventh Corps—FELIX DOMAY, General of Division.
Major-General of the Army—Gen. EDWARD LEBEUF.
Assistant Major-Generals—LEBRUN and FARRAS.
Commander-in-Chief of Artillery—Gen. SOLEILLE.
Commander-in-Chief of Engineers—Gen. COFFENIERES DE NOWECK.

The Army of the Moselle will be commanded by Marshall BAZAINE, and composed of the Second, Third and Fourth Corps. The head-quarters of the respective corps will be at St. Avold, Metz and Thionville. An examination of the map will show that in all probability this army will meet the first shock of war. The Army of the Rhine, of which Marshal MCMAHON will have command, will be composed of the First, Fifth and Seventh Corps, with head-quarters respectively at Strasbourg, Bitche, and Belfont. The corps under Gen. DE FAILLY posted around Bitche, will unite the two armies. The reserve corps in camp at Chalons-sur-Marne, under Marechal CANROBERT, will be composed of troops of the line, reinforced from reserves of all kinds. The guarde mobile is preparing for service, and there is great activity throughout France. Within three days all the battalions will have left for Chalons. A battery of mitrailleuses will be attached to each corps d'armée. Three hundred Hanoverians have volunteered in a body for the French service....Turkey offers France a contingent of 200,000 soldiers for pay.

Precautionary Measures—Armed Neutrality—Alliances—The British Channel Squadron—Irish Sympathy for France—Excitement in Dublin.

FLORENCE, July 20.—The Italian Government has called out two classes of military reserves, as a precautionary measure.

VIENNA, July 20.—Turkey has called out her reserves, and stopped the telegraphs in all directions.

BUDAPEST, July 20.—JOSIE, Count Dargan, has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the forces of Switzerland.

LONDON, July 20.—The rumors of alliances are still rumors only. Thus far no authentic information of any Power having taken sides with either combatant, has been made public. In the House of Commons, last evening, Sir R. SEYMOUR gave notice that he should question the Government concerning a secret treaty which was alleged to exist between France and Denmark, and also whether Prussia had declined the proposition made not long ago by France to disarm....Admiral MILNE has been recalled from the Mediterranean in order to command the Channel Squadron....No news of any engagement, either by land or sea, had yet been received here at noon.

DUBLIN, July 20.—A great popular demonstration in favor of France was made in this city last evening. More than 100,000 people, with twenty bands of music, were out on parade. The French and Irish flags were carried entwined. The Police changed the procession and captured those flags, but the mob rallied and retook them. Intense excitement prevailed.

War Effects in Commercial and Financial Circles—Failures in Liverpool—Increased Interest in Provisions.

LONDON, July 20.—The Liverpool markets yesterday were utterly prostrated. Nothing was ever known like the commercial depression. Many men worth $100,000 sterling a day or two ago, are bankrupt today. The business in yarns and fabrics at Manchester is also completely paralyzed.

The Standard, this morning, says that the recent tumble in stocks is altogether due to the croakers. People on Change were caught with buyers' orders in hand and undeliverable, necessitating a realization at any price. The money market remains easy, and money is freely offered at 2@2½ per cent.

LIVERPOOL, July 20—2 P. M.—There is a better feeling in the market now, and business is recovering from the effects of the panic.

PARIS, July 20.—The officers of the Bank of France announce an advance in the rate of interest to 6½ per cent.

PARIS, July 20—5½ P. M.—Bourse is growing weaker; rentes continue to decline, and are now quoted at 65 francs.

Rumor of an Encounter—No Basis for Peace Negotiations—Important Interpretation of the Treaty of Paris.

LONDON, July 20, 4½ P. M.—It is rumored that a collision took place this morning, near Forbach, between the French and Prussian advanced guards. Nothing further is known of the affair, and some doubt is cast on the report, as advices from Paris today are positive that there has been no fighting. Earl GRANVILLE reports that the determined and absolute refusal of the Emperor NAPOLEON to entertain negotiations render it probable that any attempt to renew them will be useless until a great battle has been fought. It is reported that France denies that the stipulations of the Paris Convention apply to the present war.

Action of the Fenians—A Convention to Meet in Cincinnati.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., July 20.—JAMES GIBBONS, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Fenian Brotherhood, has issued the following: "In view of the imminency of a general European war, and the strong probability of England being engaged in the struggle, a general convention of the Irish nationalists of America, irrespective of past differences or organizations, will be held in Cincinnati, Aug. 22, to adopt such measures as will best promote the cause of Irish independence.

Action of Germans in the United States.

BOSTON, July 20.—The Germans of this city have taken preliminary steps for a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall to express sympathy with Fatherland, and to raise funds for the relief of persons wounded in defending German honor.

THE WAR EXCITEMENT.

The Suicide of the French Minister—Advance in Rates of Marine Insurance from One to Ten Per Cent.—The Dry-Goods Trade and How It is Affected by the War—The Gold and Produce Markets—Decline in Flour and Wheat.

The principal topic discussed yesterday in financial and commercial circles were the suicide of the French Minister, M. PREVOST PARADOL, and the progress of the European war. The reported action of the Irish in Dublin was also earnestly discussed, and it was thought that if the demonstration was as formidable as was represented, something serious might result from it. Gold advanced to 12½ on the reception of the news above noted, but fell off soon after to 12¼. The street was filled with extras nearly all day, and the newsboys made a good thing by their sale.

MARINE INSURANCE.

The marine insurance companies of this City have agreed upon advanced rates to be charged upon goods, not contraband of war, sent to sea. The war premiums, which are in addition to the regular marine risks, range from one to ten per cent, depending upon the character of the goods and the nationality of the vessel. Sailing ships carrying property belonging to belligerents under a neutral flag are charged five per cent. to Continental ports. Property belonging to neutrals, carried in vessels under a belligerent flag, is charged eight per cent. Property owned by belligerents, carried under a belligerent flag, is charged ten per cent. These rates are the same by sail or steam. The war risks on vessels sailing to or from the West Indies or the east coast of South America are one per cent; to or from the west coast of South America, India and China seas the rates are two and four per cent., respectively.

THE DRY-GOODS TRADE.

Our reporter had interviews with several prominent men in the dry-goods trade, yesterday, including representatives of the house of H. B. CLAFLIN & Co., who have recently returned from Europe, Mr. H. B. FARNHAM, who has also just returned, and Mr. LISBY, of A. T. STEWART & Co. The last-named gentleman remarked that as yet he had no information of a state of war in Europe, and therefore could not judge of the effect of such a state of affairs.

Mr. FARNHAM said that the French and British markets were well stocked with goods which had been manufactured for the Fall trade—which is the heaviest trade of the year—and he did not apprehend that there would be any interruption to exportations from France and Germany. He thought it quite probable that the manufactories would be kept in operation notwithstanding the war, unless it should become of great magnitude and involve other countries, in which case work would probably cease. If the other markets of Europe were closed by reason of the blockade, or in consequence of a general war all over the Continent, goods would be sent out of the country by some means, and would more likely be shipped to this country. There was no probability of a rise in prices beyond that occasioned by the advance in gold. Now was the time, he said, for domestic manufacturers to increase rather than diminish their business. When he left France there were symptoms of the gathering war clouds, but nothing to indicate speedy hostilities, and he was surprised on reaching New-York on Tuesday, to learn that all Europe was in a turmoil.

A representative of the house of H. B. CLAFLIN & Co., who returned in the Scotia on Tuesday, confirms the statement of Mr. FARNHAM with respect to the Continental markets. He said he found it very difficult to place orders in France, because the bulk of the manufactured goods had already been taken up. Three-fourths of the manufactories are already completed, and the exports are very large thus far. There has been no advance in domestic goods at present, and probably will not be before August, when the stocks will be opened. By that time merchants will be able to determine more clearly what course to pursue. Last season all kinds of imported goods were sold at very low rates, and the merchants hope this season to get better prices.

In cotton goods there has been no decline, notwithstanding the fall in the raw material. Manufacturers are anxious to keep up the prices, and will do so if possible, and there must be a decline of at least four cents per pound in cotton to effect the price of white goods materially. Imported goods of all kinds are advancing, but the advance keeps pace with that of gold and will not go beyond it.

THE GERMAN STEAM-SHIP LINES.

There was nothing new yesterday at either the Hamburg or Bremen offices. The agents were awaiting the arrival of the steamers now on the ocean to obtain advices which they were unable to get by cable, and when these were received they would be able to act understandingly and could then determine what course they would pursue.

Baron GEROLT, the Prussian Minister, visited the North German Consulate yesterday, and was waited upon by a number of merchants, who wished to obtain his advice with respect to the dispatch of vessels for the Continent. He was without instructions, and could only advise them to dispatch their ships and look out for French cruisers. The agents of the Bremen line have, it is said, determined to send a steamer on the regular day, hoping that the other should be countermanded from the other side. They may have some difficulty in obtaining freight, but none in getting what passengers they desire. Three English steamers left port yesterday, the Java, Colorado and Iowa. They took out a large number of French and German passengers, who were home when news of the war came.

THE SUICIDE OF M. PARADOL.

The suicide of the French Minister created universal surprise, and was commented upon in various ways. It was thought that no trouble would result therefrom, as Mr. BUZENART has not left the country, and will assume direction of the Legation until another person is sent out. Some of the Germans attributed the suicide to the fact that M. PARADOL found popular sentiment so much in favor of the Prussians, which could scarcely affect him if it was a fact.

THE GOLD MARKET.

The Gold Exchange was very far from excitement yesterday, and the fluctuations were slight all day, compared with the changes of the day before. During the formal opening of the Board, sales were made at prices ranging from 12¾@12½. From this the gold figure the price was 12½, after which the market ran up to 12¾@12½. Then the news came of the suicide of the French Minister, and the price ran up to 12⅝. The reported naval battle on the Rhine helped this advance; also, a report that Turkey had called out her reserves. On the statement that 12⅝ was coming to us in the morning, 12⅝ at London, a bull movement commenced, and the price was forced up to 12¾. At noon the regular Treasury sale of gold took place, but only $625,000 was sold for, and all was taken. Upon this the price advanced from 12¾, to which it had fallen, to 12¾. Late in the day it advanced to 12⅝, but declined to 12¾, and closed at 12¾@12⅝. The clearances at the Gold Exchange Bank were $129,394,000 on Tuesday, and the immense business which has crowded on this institution lately, called forth the following communication from Mr. JACOB HUSSELL, the President of the Bank:

"To facilitate the early payment of balances the desire for clearings of gold with the bank during the present activity in the market, it is respectfully and earnestly requested that all statements be made out with special care, rendered at as early an hour as possible, and in plain legible figures, with the amount the paid in. The bank will use its utmost endeavors to make the transactions satisfactory under the rules in all concerned."

There was a disposition manifested yesterday to deal ex-clearing-house, from the fear that possibly the Gold Exchange Bank might not be able to transact its business promptly, and that there might be a repetition of the troubles of last September.

THE PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

The Produce Exchange was without the usual cable advices from the English markets, up to the close of business hours, and operators were not disposed to enter into any extensive negotiations pending the receipt of later news from Liverpool. It was stated that private dispatches had been received which made mention of some commercial disturbances and consequent failures at Liverpool. More conclusive proof of such disasters was subsequently received by cable, and will be found in our news columns.

In the line of shipping grades of flour there was a strong desire to realize manifested, partly by speculative holders and partly by exporters who were obliged to meet foreign views. Prices consequently gave way, some fifteen to twenty-five cents per barrel, and at the close were very irregular. Movements for both prompt and forward delivery were on a restricted scale, even at the reduced figures. There was more demand for trade and family grades of flour, which brought full prices, and were not offered freely. But little disposition was manifested to purchase on speculation.

The wheat market suffered a severe depression under increased offerings of other than strictly prime samples. Prices declined three to four cents per bushel, and closed in favor of the buyer. The transactions were much lighter than on either of the preceeding days of the week. Shippers bought with less confidence, and speculators evinced little spirit in their operations.

Corn and oats were in unusually good request, largely on speculative account, and higher in price.

Provisions were again stronger in price and in fair demand, partly on speculation and for forward delivery.

The freight market was poorly supplied with vessels adapted to the grain trade, and extreme rates were realized in the moderate engagements effected during the day. There was a better inquiry for neutral vessels for the petroleum trade at strong rates, and some demand was noted, also, for tobacco room for Mediterranean ports.

The cotton market was dull, heavy and irregular. Many of the dealers were occupied a good portion of the day in connection with the meeting to organize a Cotton Exchange. There was less activity in the grocery line, but prices were well supported and stocks were not pressed on. The petroleum market was irregular and lower in price in New-York, on a limited business, mainly for contract settlement for refined oil. In Philadelphia there was rather more inquiry for refined, and the later bids showed a stronger market.

In general merchandise the movements were comparatively light, and as a rule, within the range of former prices.

A FRENCH DEMONSTRATION.

The news of a riot in Dublin created an intense excitement among traders yesterday, and it was said that steps were taken to get up a public demonstration in favor of France, in which the Irish will take a prominent part. It is reported that the French fleet in the West Indies has been ordered to rendezvous at this port.

THE FOREIGN MAILS.

The Postmaster-General has arranged for tri-weekly mails to Europe—one less than at present. His telegram inquiring if France would allow the German steamers carrying the United States mails to pass, provided they did not carry contraband of war, has not been answered. If the answer is not favorable, letters will be sent by the English steamers, and should be addressed via England.

THE WAR AND IMMIGRATION.

Effect of the War Upon German Immigration—The Influx of Teutons to this Country Ceased for the Present—Inside Views of the Department of Immigration.

Castle Garden, the Mecca of foreigners, no longer echoes to the tread of the countless hosts of German immigrants that for so many years have sought a refuge under the "banner of liberty." The sudden change in the aspect of affairs in Europe, and especially the stringent laws of Prussia regarding her citizen soldiery leaving her dominions during a foreign war, have tended to decrease the exodus of Germans. Hamburg, Bremen and Lubec, the great centers of emigration to this country, are now, doubtless, blockaded by French squadrons, and as there are no steam-ship lines from Trieste, in Austrian territory, to this country, there is now no possible outlet, unless it be through Holland, whose ports are watched with jealous eyes by the enemies of Germany. The great fleet of German vessels that formerly plied between this port and the Baltic lies idle, and on account of the serious condition of affairs, it is probable that they will be compelled to register under new colors—either English or American—before they can again venture out.

GERMAN IMMIGRATION.

During the past year fully 300,000 Germans, from the different portions of Austria, Bavaria, Prussia and Baden sought a refuge in this country against 110,000 during the year previous. Those who composed this vast army of invasion were mostly well to do farmers who brought along their families and a goodly number of golden thalers. Some remained in the Metropolis with their friends, while the major portion sought the fertile lands of the West, where they found opportunities for commencing life anew in the agricultural districts, while many cast their lot among the busy hives of industry in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

THE FORMER RENDEZVOUS.

At Castle Garden, yesterday evening, instead of the usual number of Teutons generally to be found on hand when a Bremen steamer has arrived, Irish and English peasants, for the most part, with their families and family accoutrements, were lounging about the halls and corridors of the building. Sprinkled among these were a number of Germans passengers by the City of Washington and Westphalia, who seemed utterly lost with bewilderment at the strange sights that surrounded them. Instead of presenting their tickets for baggage and other things that pertained to their party, they remained huddled up in one corner as though frightened at the officers who now and then wedged their way among the mass. When the truth was afterward ascertained it was found that a story had been circulated by an 'immigrant runner' that they were all subject to a draft, and were to be immediately taken back on the steamer Westphalia, the steamer that a portion arrived on. When they discovered the hoax they took courage and eventually found their way to the cars en route for the West.

The steamer City of Washington, of the Inman line, and the Westphalia, of the Bremen Steam-ship Company, brought over altogether some 400 Germans. In conversation, one or two of the most intelligent stated that so far as their information extended, the laboring classes of Prussia and especially those having a small capital, were without exception, and could only advise them to dispatch their ships and look out for French cruisers. The agents of the Bremen line have, it is said, determined to send a steamer on the regular day, hoping that the other should be countermanded from the other side. They may have some difficulty in obtaining freight, but none in getting what passengers they desire. Three English steamers left port yesterday, the Java, Colorado and Iowa. THE FOREIGN MAILS.

The Postmaster-General has arranged for tri-weekly mails to Europe—one less than at present. His telegram inquiring if France would allow the German steamers carrying the United States mails to pass, provided they did not carry contraband of war, has not been answered. If the answer is not favorable, letters will be sent by the English steamers, and should be addressed via England.

THE WAR AND IMMIGRATION.

Effect of the War Upon German Immigration—The Influx of Teutons to this Country Ceased for the Present—Inside Views of the Department of Immigration.

Castle Garden, the Mecca of foreigners, no longer echoes to the tread of the countless hosts of German immigrants that for so many years have sought a refuge under the "banner of liberty." The sudden change in the aspect of affairs in Europe, and especially the stringent laws of Prussia regarding her citizen soldiery leaving her dominions during a foreign war, have tended to decrease the exodus of Germans. Hamburg, Bremen and Lubec, the great centers of emigration to this country, are now, doubtless, blockaded by French squadrons, and as there are no steam-ship lines from Trieste, in Austrian territory, to this country, there is now no possible outlet, unless it be through Holland, whose ports are watched with jealous eyes by the enemies of Germany. The great fleet of German vessels that formerly plied between this port and the Baltic lies idle, and on account of the serious condition of affairs, it is probable that they will be compelled to register under new colors—either English or American—before they can again venture out.

GERMAN IMMIGRATION.

During the past year fully 300,000 Germans, from the different portions of Austria, Bavaria, Prussia and Baden sought a refuge in this country against 110,000 during the year previous. Those who composed this vast army of invasion were mostly well to do farmers who brought along their families and a goodly number of golden thalers. Some remained in the Metropolis with their friends, while the major portion sought the fertile lands of the West, where they found opportunities for commencing life anew in the agricultural districts, while many cast their lot among the busy hives of industry in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

THE FORMER RENDEZVOUS.

At Castle Garden, yesterday evening, instead of the usual number of Teutons generally to be found on hand when a Bremen steamer has arrived, Irish and English peasants, for the most part, with their families and family accoutrements, were lounging about the halls and corridors of the building. Sprinkled among these were a number of Germans passengers by the City of Washington and Westphalia, who seemed utterly lost with bewilderment at the strange sights that surrounded them. Instead of presenting their tickets for baggage and other things that pertained to their party, they remained huddled up in one corner as though frightened at the officers who now and then wedged their way among the mass. When the truth was afterward ascertained it was found that a story had been circulated by an 'immigrant runner' that they were all subject to a draft, and were to be immediately taken back on the steamer Westphalia, the steamer that a portion arrived on. When they discovered the hoax they took courage and eventually found their way to the cars en route for the West.

The steamer City of Washington, of the Inman line, and the Westphalia, of the Bremen Steam-ship Company, brought over altogether some 400 Germans. In conversation, one or two of the most intelligent stated that so far as their information extended, the laboring classes of Prussia and especially those having a small capital, were without exception, and could only advise them to dispatch their ships and look out for French cruisers. The agents of the Bremen line have, it is said, determined to send a steamer on the regular day, hoping that the other should be countermanded from the other side. They may have some difficulty in obtaining freight, but none in getting what passengers they desire. Three English steamers left port yesterday, the Java, Colorado and Iowa. They took out a large number of French and German passengers, who were home when news of the war came.

THE SUICIDE OF M. PARADOL.

The suicide of the French Minister created universal surprise, and was commented upon in various ways. It was thought that no trouble would result therefrom, as Mr. BUZENART has not left the country, and will assume direction of the Legation until another person is sent out. Some of the Germans attributed the suicide to the fact that M. PARADOL found popular sentiment so much in favor of the Prussians, which could scarcely affect him if it was a fact.

THE GOLD MARKET.

The Gold Exchange was very far from excitement yesterday, and the fluctuations were slight all day, compared with the changes of the day before. During the formal opening of the Board, sales were made at prices ranging from 12¾@12½. From this the gold figure the price was 12½, after which the market ran up to 12¾@12½. Then the news came of the suicide of the French Minister, and the price ran up to 12⅝. The reported naval battle on the Rhine helped this advance; also, a report that Turkey had called out her reserves. On the statement that 12⅝ was coming to us in the morning, 12⅝ at London, a bull movement commenced, and the price was forced up to 12¾. At noon the regular Treasury sale of gold took place, but only $625,000 was sold for, and all was taken. Upon this the price advanced from 12¾, to which it had fallen, to 12¾. Late in the day it advanced to 12⅝, but declined to 12¾, and closed at 12¾@12⅝. The clearances at the Gold Exchange Bank were $129,394,000 on Tuesday, and the immense business which has crowded on this institution lately, called forth the following communication from Mr. JACOB HUSSELL, the President of the Bank:

"To facilitate the early payment of balances the desire for clearings of gold with the bank during the present activity in the market, it is respectfully and earnestly requested that all statements be made out with special care, rendered at as early an hour as possible, and in plain legible figures, with the amount the paid in. The bank will use its utmost endeavors to make the transactions satisfactory under the rules in all concerned."

There was a disposition manifested yesterday to deal ex-clearing-house, from the fear that possibly the Gold Exchange Bank might not be able to transact its business promptly, and that there might be a repetition of the troubles of last September.

THE PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

The Produce Exchange was without the usual cable advices from the English markets, up to the close of business hours, and operators were not disposed to enter into any extensive negotiations pending the receipt of later news from Liverpool. It was stated that private dispatches had been received which made mention of some commercial disturbances and consequent failures at Liverpool. More conclusive proof of such disasters was subsequently received by cable, and will be found in our news columns.

In the line of shipping grades of flour there was a strong desire to realize manifested, partly by speculative holders and partly by exporters who were obliged to meet foreign views. Prices consequently gave way, some fifteen to twenty-five cents per barrel, and at the close were very irregular. Movements for both prompt and forward delivery were on a restricted scale, even at the reduced figures. There was more demand for trade and family grades of flour, which brought full prices, and were not offered freely. But little disposition was manifested to purchase on speculation.

The wheat market suffered a severe depression under increased offerings of other than strictly prime samples. Prices declined three to four cents per bushel, and closed in favor of the buyer. The transactions were much lighter than on either of the preceeding days of the week. Shippers bought with less confidence, and speculators evinced little spirit in their operations.

Corn and oats were in unusually good request, largely on speculative account, and higher in price.

Provisions were again stronger in price and in fair demand, partly on speculation and for forward delivery.

The freight market was poorly supplied with vessels adapted to the grain trade, and extreme rates were realized in the moderate engagements effected during the day. There was a better inquiry for neutral vessels for the petroleum trade at strong rates, and some demand was noted, also, for tobacco room for Mediterranean ports.

The cotton market was dull, heavy and irregular. Many of the dealers were occupied a good portion of the day in connection with the meeting to organize a Cotton Exchange. There was less activity in the grocery line, but prices were well supported and stocks were not pressed on. The petroleum market was irregular and lower in price in New-York, on a limited business, mainly for contract settlement for refined oil. In Philadelphia there was rather more inquiry for refined, and the later bids showed a stronger market.

In general merchandise the movements were comparatively light, and as a rule, within the range of former prices.

A FRENCH DEMONSTRATION.

The news of a riot in Dublin created an intense excitement among traders yesterday, and it was said that steps were taken to get up a public demonstration in favor of France, in which the Irish will take a prominent part. It is reported that the French fleet in the West Indies has been ordered to rendezvous at this port.

THE LATEST WAR NEWS.

Partisan Discussion in the British Parliament—Deprecated—Prussians Believed to be Short of Ammunition—British Troops to Preserve Belgian Neutrality—The Pope Openly Favors Prussia.

LONDON, July 20.—The Pall Mall Gazette deprecates the exhibition of partisan spirit in the Parliamentary discussions on the war between France and Prussia. It is believed here that the Prussians are short of ammunition; that the French know it, and hence the great activity of their movements. Military men affirm that the Prussian Engelgewehren is equivalent to the French Mitrailleuse. The ditches around the forts of Mayence have been filled with water, and works at that place are considered to be impregnable. It is said the British Government is considering the question of despatching troops across the Channel to preserve the neutrality of Belgium. The Eastern Budget, a semi-official Austrian journal, denies that the sympathy of Austria is with Germany. According to the accounts from Rome, the Pope openly favors Prussia. The men-of-war Astie and Hirondelle, accompanying the French fleet, got aground on the Island of Vlieland, off the Dutch coast. When lightened of their guns, they may get afloat.

An Impressive Scene in the Reichstag—An Address to the King.

BERLIN, July 20.—The Reichstag voted unanimously, a loyal address in reply to the King's speech. On the reading of the address the members of the Reichstag and the entire assemblage of spectators, including Prince LEOPOLD, Mr. BANCROFT, the American Minister, and other notable persons, arose, and remained standing until the Effect in Europe of the Sudden Warlike Attitude of France Toward Prussia.

M. De Grammont's Dispatch to Madrid and its Consequence.

Intense Excitement in Spain on the Announcement of Prim's Choice.

The First Signs of Trouble and How They Were Received.

We print below highly important letters from our correspondents in Paris and Madrid, giving full particulars of the fast and sudden warlike movements in France, occasioned by the announcement of the choice of a German Prince for the throne of Spain; and also of the reception of this news by the different parties in Spain, the commotion caused by it, and the proceedings in the Council of Ministers.

THE EXCITEMENT IN FRANCE.

Commotion Caused by the Declaration of War—M. Grammont's Dispatch—Napoleon's Determination to Fight—Public Opinion—The Situation—The Exciting Scene in the Corps Legislatif.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, July 8, 1870.

The declaration made by the Minister of Foreign Affairs in the Corps Legislatif on Wednesday, and which, I understand, was forwarded to you by the agent of the Associated Press, has, I need not say, thrown the country, and, I may add, all Europe, into a fever of excitement. It has paralyzed business of all kinds, cast down the funds on all the stock markets of the Continent, and set families trembling not only for the security of their incomes but for the fate of the sons and brothers who are liable to conscription. Already, I understand, orders have been given at the Ministry of War here to take all the young men over twenty-five years of age, who are on the cadres, and enroll them in the Garde Mobile.

M. GRAMMONT'S DISPATCH.

That the Government is not waiting for the results of dilatory negotiations with Prussia to prepare for the probability of their unfavorable termination, is evident from this and other facts which I learned this morning. The Gaulois publishes a dispatch, said to have been forwarded to Madrid by M. DE GRAMMONT yesterday, which professes to be couched in the following terms:

"France hopes that Spain will renounce the choice of the only candidate who can be entirely disagreeable to it.

"The French Government reminds the Madrid Cabinet that in interdicting to the Carlist and other refugees the Spanish territory, it has powerfully contributed to the establishment of the Provisional Government."

The Gaulois omits the concluding portion of the dispatch, which, like the postscript to a lady's letter, contains the sting. It has been communicated to me from a source on which I have reason to place reliance.

"The French Government hopes that the susceptibilities of the Cabinet at Madrid will not be wounded by the coincidence that it has deemed it necessary to place a corps of observation on the Pyrenees. When events in Spain seemed to threaten the outbreak of a civil war it has always been the habit to strengthen its garrisons in that region.

"With the assurances of its desire to maintain intact the friendly relations which have existed between the two Cabinets since the revolution of September, I have the honor to subscribe myself, &c., &c."

At a late hour last night no dispatch had been received by the Government from Berlin, and none that I can hear of has arrived today. The Berlin Cabinet would, therefore, seem destined to abide by the answer which it sent to the dispatch of the Minister of Foreign Affairs on Wednesday morning, and which was confined simply to the statement that it was entirely ignorant of the fact of the candidature of Prince LEOPOLD.

RESULT OF FRANCE'S POLICY.

Now that the public have had time to reflect on the opportuneness and consequences of the declaration of M. DE GRAMMONT, there has been a considerable reaction in the patriotic enthusiasm which it excited. Most people are agreed on thinking, that to avenge its amour propre, wounded by the blindness and incompetency of its diplomatic agents, the Government has thrown down the gauntlet to Prussia and Spain, and seriously compromised the peace of Europe. You will remember how, in my former letters, I pointed out to you the irritating effect which, in spite of his professions of neutrality, the attentions of the Imperial family to ISABELLA and her son were likely to produce in Spain. In a conversation between the Emperor and M. DE GRAMMONT, it is said, the latter attributed the present imbroglio to this line of policy, and did not hesitate to condemn it as a great fault. His Majesty admitted that it was, perhaps, an error, but excused it by the position of the unfortunate Queen and her family, who, after all, had claims on his hospitality. "The mistake, however, cannot be recalled," he added, "and I should like to know how you propose to rectify it." "I would regain it," replied the Minister, "by sustaining the candidature of the Duc DE MONTPENSIER." "Let us sustain it, then," rejoined the Emperor. "Better a wound to the interests of the dynasty than a wound to the honor and interests of France."

THE PRESS ON THE CRISIS.

The Paris Press has not had time as yet to fully appreciate the situation created by M. GRAMMONT'S declaration. Their impressions, however, may be gleaned from their current observations on the proceedings in the Chambers. The Debats examines the question coldly and condemns the Ministry for getting excited over it and alarming the country. It believes that there will be no difficulty in maintaining peace. The belligerent editor of the Pays is enchanted at the prospect of a war, and predicts another brilliant series of conquests for the Empire. The Moniteur thinks the selection of the Prussian Prince to the Spanish crown would furnish at once a casus belli, and indulges in a fling at the friends and supporters of M. ROUHER, "The diplomatic career of M. BENEDETTI," it says, in closing "is now complete. He prepared Sadowa and raised the question of Luxembourg; there only remained for him to be absent from his post the day on which the Spanish revolution sought its denouement at Berlin. This is what happened to M. BENEDETTI, who went to take the waters at Wildbad after dining with the Queen of Prussia at Coblentz. The friends of MM. ROUHER and LA VALETTE are decidedly the fortune of France."

The Public, M. ROUHER'S organ, curiously enough profits by the same events to attack his successor. All weapons are good to politicians. "The Ministry of honest people," says the Public, "is decidedly the Ministry of simpletons; simple in the interior, simple abroad. In the direction of Rome, the Ministry deceives itself and makes a false step; in that of Spain it is deceived and meets with a fall. Such is our régime; either dupe, as in the Hohenzollern-Prim affair, or accomplice as in the affair of the treaty, or blundering as in the affair of the Council, to say nothing of that of the capitulations. We are told that the Cabinet will resist the project of PRIM. How will it resist it? England approves it; Prussia accepts it, and it is not impossible that Spain, precisely because we are opposed to it, will give it its adhesion. What will our Ministers do then? War with Prussia? It would be monstrous. With Spain? It would be madness. * * * It is from our constitutional Ministers that we must demand an account of their conduct. And when we see M. PRIM exciting himself like a Spaniard, and M. DE BISMARCK acting like a Prussian, we must satisfy ourselves whether M.M. OLLIVIER and DE GRAMMONT are conducting themselves like Frenchmen." [As to the Democratic and Republican journals, they did not find epithets too strong to apply to the imprudence of M. DE GRAMMONT'S declaration.] "French diplomacy," the Siècle says, "struck with blindness and deafness, has attained by its conduct in this affair the ideal of folly and incapacity." There can be no question of the correctness of this view of the conduct of M.M. BENEDETTI and MERCIER, and the Government has confirmed it by recalling both Ministers.

THE EMPEROR'S COURAGE.

I am not satisfied that their disgrace will convince people that the Emperor was not prepared for, and looking forward to, some pretext of this kind for precipitating a breach with Prussia. The eagerness with which he availed himself of it, by pushing M. DE GRAMMONT into the Tribune with a declaration the imprudence of which is now generally acknowledged, would certainly seem to justify the existing suspicions on the subject. It is certain that a successful war would serve the interests of the dynasty as much as it would be injurious to the interests the rest of the country. M. OLLIVIER and M. DE GRAMMONT, before consultations with the Deputies of the Chamber, spoke freely of the probabilities of war. The former said, in reply, that, fatingly full earnestly to a group that had gathered around him, immediately after his speech: "In two months we shall have the Rhine, or Prussia will have France down to the Pyrenees." Gen. LEBOEUF, the Minister of War, declares on his part that he has from 135,000 to 150,000 men ready, as a moment's notice, to occupy the Rhine.

WHAT SOREN IN THE CORPS LEGISLATIF.

Yesterday an effort was made in the Legislative Body by M. EMILE PICARD and M. JULES FAVRE to extract from the Ministry a statement of what had transpired between the two Cabinets of Paris and Berlin since the declaration of M. DE GRAMMONT. If the Government had received an answer to that ultimatum, they contended that the country should receive immediate intimation of it. An incident of rather a personal character grew out of it. M. JULES FAVRE having demanded that the public should not be kept in a state of suspense, and that the discussion upon the subject should be fixed for the following day, M. EMILE OLLIVIER rose and begged of the Chamber to adhere to the decision which it had adopted in the previous day's sitting, and to postpone the debate.

M. JULES FAVRE—Yes; to postpone it indefinitely, in order to afford an opportunity for tripotage (swindling) at the Bourse. [Loud protestations at the Center and Right, and cries of "Order!"]

President SCHNEIDER—I cannot allow to pass—

Baron DE BENOIST—Order! Order! This is odious!

President SCHNEIDER—I cannot allow to pass without a recall to order an imputation which seems to bear directly against the Government, an imputation that I cannot admit in any degree. [Applause.]

A DEPUTY—It is infamous.

M. EMILE OLLIVIER, Minister of Justice—M. JULES FAVRE has a habit of manifesting great susceptibility when any one takes the liberty of qualifying his words. I content myself with asking him to whom he addresses the terms which he has just used.

M. JULES FAVRE—I address them to all who speculate. [Fresh exclamations.] I maintain what I have said, and I complain it. I say it is the duty of the Administration not to allow to remain suspended over the country a state of uncertainty which is its work, and for which it is consequently responsible, or to let that uncertainty serve all sorts of evil plans, and which are revealed precisely by the speculations of the Bourse. [Interruptions from different parts of the Chamber.]

M. GRANIER DE CASSAGNAC—Allons donc. It is only you who are capable of entertaining such ideas.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The embarrassed explanation which you have just heard—[Murmurs on the Left; applause on the Right and Center.]

M. JULES FAVRE—Embarrassed!

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Suffices to judge the words which, to say the least of them, are strange.

M. JULES FAVRE—Judge them as you please, Monsieur; it is no affair of mine. [Exclamations and murmurs from a great number of benches.]

A VOICE ON THE RIGHT—It is the affair of the Chamber.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The honorable M. JULES FAVRE is correct; I have no right to judge him, and I do not judge him, but I have the right when he utters words touching—or at least having the pretension to touch, if they are not of an inexcusable levity—that which is most delicate in the conscience of honest men—I have the right, I say, to take them up, as I have done.

Numerous VOICES—Yes! yes! you are right.

M. CORNELIS—It is now or never the opportunity to say, like those gentlemen of the Opposition, "The country will judge."

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I have begged of the Chamber to maintain its decision of yesterday. When the Government thinks it is in a position to offer useful information to the Chamber it will itself provoke a discussion. It will leave to no one the privilege of demanding that a day shall be fixed for the purpose. [Interruptions on the Left.]

M. MAGNIN—It is the history of Sadowa.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Assuredly, if there is a reproach which cannot affect the present Government, it is that of disseminating anything in this Chamber, for it has suffered for an interpellation from one of its members for him to the extent to which he could speak, to explain himself regarding an event which, for him, had only a few days' date. [Applause.] The Chamber and the country may rest assured that we shall know how, in the circumstance as in others, to ally firmness with moderation; that we shall not forget what the Chamber or what the country desires, but we refuse to engage ourselves before the proper time, in rash as inconsiderate discussions. [Applause.]

M. JULES FAVRE—What is important above all things, is that the country and the Chamber shall not be distanced by events which, once accomplished, will chain us completely and prevent us taking, perhaps, a salutary resolution. The Minister said yesterday that war would not be declared without the Chamber being informed of it beforehand. What I ask is that it shall be equally advised regarding the events which may prepare the way for war, that is to say that he shall not learn it in ignorance of facts which, from their gravity and nature, may trouble the peace of Europe. That is just where we are now. Yesterday a state of things was announced to us as consummated in which we could pronounce an opinion independent of any kind of appreciation on the future, consequently the Chamber, at least according to my view of the case, will be failing in its duty if it does not fix at once the day on which it desires to resume the discussion of the interpellation.

The close of the incident being called for, the President put it to the vote and it was carried.

MOVEMENTS IN SPAIN.

Lawlessness in Madrid—Excitement over Prim's Choice of a King—Heated Discussions Among the Ministry—Their Final Action.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Monday, July 4, 1870.

There is in this city a band of sixty scoundrels bearing the designation of la Porra, at the head of which is an ex-printer, at present conserje of the Royal Palace, which commits, from time to time, atrocities of the worst kind, and which the Government never brings before the tribunals, although it knows every member of it. On Saturday night last the Carlists were celebrating the opening of their Casino, where a banquet was to take place. The Porra band took it into their heads that it was improper that the partisans of Don CARLOS should be allowed to meet, and they began maltreating the members of that party as they entered and left the Casino. Disputes and altercations took place, and, as usual in such cases, the Republicans and the Carlists attacked each other with sticks and knives. The chief of the band having been wounded rather severely in the head, his companions pursued two young men who had separated rather energetically against the conduct of the band, seized the first, who had taken refuge in a vehicle, and killed him by stabbing him with a dagger. The second received a sword-thrust through the center of his breast. He also has died of his wounds. On Friday night, M. CONCHA, a Deputy and member of the permanent Commission of the Cortes, had eleven shots from a revolver fired at him by the members of the Porra. He wrote to the President of the Cortes to complain of the attack which had been made upon him. The Carlists felt it necessary to close their Casino, and they did well, for, last night, the same band, reinforced by a large number of other persons, presented themselves about 9 o'clock before the house in which it had been held. Finding that they no longer met there, the members of the Porra met to the Casino of the Union Liberal, in another street. There they received explanations which undeceived them. They set out again for another Casino, (a Republican one,) which they equally respected. This evening fresh troubles are anticipated, for the Government has taken measures to stop the career of the leaders of the band and the attorney of the Crown examination which I have just furnished to you.

THE CABINET'S DIVISIONS FOR THE SESSION.

Yesterday a Council of Ministers was held, which lasted from 4 to 8 P.M. Gen. PRIM presided. He communicated to his colleagues the fact that Prince LEOPOLD HOHENZOLLERN-SIGMARINGEN had accepted in principle the offer which had been made to him of the Crown of Spain, provided that the Cortes ratified it. The discussion which followed was long and stormy. Certain Ministers believe that it is dangerous to seek the alliance of Germany, because of the geographical position of Spain. They are afraid that this alliance may one day cause Spain serious embarrassments. Others pretend that this alliance is preferable to that proposed by a large party in Spain, who desire rather an alliance with France, now that the Iberian Union is no longer possible. The Ministers separated after deciding that they would repair to the Palace of La Granja this evening, to hold a council under the presidency of the Regent. There will be discussed the question whether the candidature of Prince LEOPOLD is to be proposed to the Cortes. How French diplomacy will regard the project of the Spanish Government remains to be seen. Señor OLOZAGA has declared through the journals that are devoted to him that he knew nothing of the steps taken at the Court of Prussia. If this be taken as evidence that the Cabinet of the Tuileries was also ignorant of them. I must not leave you in ignorance of the fact that certain friends of PRIM hope that France will oppose no obstacle to the choice on the part of Spain, because Prince LEOPOLD is, they say, one of the descendants of the MURAT family, although the Almanach de Gotha is silent on the subject. The Republicans, the Alphonsists and the Carlists are in a state of great excitement since they heard the particulars of the discussion at the last Council of Ministers, and they are preparing to combat the German candidature tooth and nail.

Prim's Conduct Approved—Preparations for the Reception of the New King—His Plans and Prospects—The First Signs of Trouble—France's Protest—Attitude of Spain.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Wednesday, July 6, 1870.

You will have been informed by telegraph that at a Council of Ministers, held at La Granja, the Regent has approved of the conduct of Gen. PRIM, and has authorized him to present officially the candidature of the Prussian Prince, LEOPOLD HOHENZOLLERN-SIGMARINGEN, respecting whom I have already been able to give you some account. He is thirty-five years of age, married to the sister of the King of Portugal, and passes in Germany as being a Prince of distinguished manners and appearance. He is Colonel of a Prussian regiment, and although a grandson of JOACHIM MURAT, is closely allied to the reigning family of Prussia. The candidature of this Prince is approved of by the Spanish Government, which has decided to summon the Cortes for the 22d of this month, and submit his election to them on the 1st of August next. You are aware that by the terms of the law relating to the choice of a Monarch, the sittings of the Cortes must be suspended for eight days prior to their proceeding to the election. The friends of PRIM hope that this candidature will obtain two hundred votes in the Cortes, and that Prince LEOPOLD will be crowned King the 1st of November, the day on which the Deputies, who leave for the Provinces after the 1st August, return to the capital.

THE PRINCE'S PLANS AND PROSPECTS.

The friends of the Ministers pretend that a squadron will be dispatched to bring the Prince from Germany to some port in Spain, where he will be met by a deputation from the Cortes who will accompany him to Madrid. The Prince will receive an income of twenty millions of reals ($1,000,000) from the civil list. He has already expressed a wish not to be compelled to keep up the etiquette of the Court of Spain, but to be allowed to live without pomp, and in a manner similar to the Kings of Prussia.

HOW PRIM KEPT HIS SECRET.

From the information I have been able to gather, and which is from a good source, it appears that neither M. OLOZAGA, nor M. RASCON, Spanish Ambassador at Berlin, nor even the Regent, nor the colleagues of Gen. PRIM, had information of these negotiations any more than the diplomats in Paris, who only heard at the last moment of Prince LEOPOLD'S acceptance of the offer of the crown sent by him to Gen. PRIM. M. SALAZAR DE MAZARREDO, PRIM and the Prince were the only persons who were in the secret.

THE PROTEST OF FRANCE.

The French Ambassador at Madrid had in the first place an interview with Gen. PRIM, and then one with the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs, at which he protested, in the name of the French Government, against an election which France would be justified in considering as a serious attempt against the balance of power in Europe, and which she would energetically oppose. It appears that the French Ambassador grew rather warm with the General, so much so that the latter is reported to have said to his friends that unless he was more moderate in his language he would write out his passports and take them to him himself.

ALLIANCE WITH PRUSSIA.

The Spanish Government has sought the alliance of Prussia in order to protect against the diplomacy of the Tuileries, whose sympathy for the restoration of Prince ALPHONSE has caused the greatest displeasure to Spain. The Spanish Government expects that the candidature of the Prussian Prince will meet with great opposition in the Cortes, as well as throughout the whole of Spain, from the Republicans, the Carlists, the Orleanists and the supporters of Prince ALPHONSE, but they hope to triumph in the Cortes, and to impose by force upon the country one whom the people are far from being kindly disposed toward, because he is the grandson of King MURAT, who, as you know, recalls to the minds of all Spaniards painful recollections. If he is elected, the Spanish people can suppose the celebration of the anniversary of their independence on the 2d of May, for people are very ignorant at Madrid and in Spain generally that Prince LEOPOLD is a descendant of King MURAT, who in 1808 and 1814 so terribly bombarded that city.

THE POSITION OF PRIM'S OPPONENTS.

I must not leave you in ignorance of the fact that the Republicans, who have so strongly pleaded against every foreign candidature, sternly oppose the election of a Prince belonging to the family of MURAT. They will be supported by the Carlists, and the adherents of Prince ALPHONSE and ESPARTERO. The Ministerialists declare themselves in believing that the Prussian candidate will have two hundred votes in the Cortes. This result cannot take place, if, on the 1st of August, the day fixed upon for the election, the union Liberals unite with the Progressists. A large number of the Unionists have joined PRIM. I am assured that POSADA, HERRERA, ELIZO ROSAS and TORRES have declared that they will accept the decision of a majority of the Cortes, whatever it may be. The Carlists have decided to suspend the publication of ten newspapers published in Madrid, belonging to their party, as a means of protesting against the attempts made upon them by the la Porra Revolucionaria band, and also with the view of exciting in the provinces a general rising against the authorities, who took no steps to prevent the assassinations until the fourth day.

CELEBRATION OF THE FOURTH.

The little colony of Americans here celebrated the anniversary of their independence after a fashion. There was no reception at the American Legation, as all its members were away at La Granja; but Dr. MCKENZIE gave a banquet in the gardens of the Retiro, at which were present about thirty persons, and among them several of high social and political distinction in Madrid. M. Figueras, Gen. Izquierdo, the Count de Cuba, Messrs. Escosura Brothers, the Marquis of Benemejí, Marquis of Falloden, Col. O'Hagen, and other notabilities belonging to the different parties, were among the guests.

THE MINISTERIAL NEGOTIATIONS—MEASURES TOWARD THE PRUSSIAN PRINCE.

The Paris correspondent of the London Telegraph transmits the following communication from Madrid, which, he says, has just been received by the Imperial Government: "Our city is in a state of great agitation, and events of vital importance are expected to occur, and, so far as my information is correct—and I firmly believe that it is—the Ministerial negotiations recently accredited by Marshal PRIM have secretly united Madrid for Jesus, in France, and have offered the Spanish Crown to Prince HOHENZOLLERN, Sigmaringen, and the Prince accepts the offer with the greatest pleasure. This result is due to Marshal PRIM, who has greatly cleared his friends, who are holding meetings to concert measures for averting, if possible, this disastrous catastrophe. We Spaniards, of all shades of opinion, cannot forget that the Prince of HOHENZOLLERN is grandson of a Prussian belonging to a family which is connected in the purest Castilian blood to be shed. He is by the maternal side descended from that MURAT who bombarded Madrid during the war of independence, which filled every Spanish household with mourning, from San Roque to Irun, from the Bay of Biscay to the Mediterranean. No wonder that the name of MURAT should be execrated throughout the length and breadth of Spain. A Hohenzollern Murat will never be accepted by the Spanish as their king; but the opinion is entertained in the highest diplomatic circles that should by any fatality which God forbid, a Hohenzollern be placed on the throne, our unhappy country would be isolated, as regards the Great European Powers; order and tranquility would be overthrown; and commerce would be reduced to a mere shadow of what it is at present."

A scientific disciple of Sir ISAAC WALTON contends that trout-fishing is not a cruel sport, and argues that, in being taken from water, where there is but little oxygen into the air, the wriggling of the fish on dry land is indicative of ecstacy, and not of agony. This completely upsets Mr. BERGH's theory of cruelty to fishes in and out of the water.

The citizens of Norwich, Conn., were thrown into a state of great alarm on Monday last by the sudden appearance of a snarling cur, foaming at the mouth. They fled before him in terror. Serious injury might have been done only for the presence of mind displayed by a shop man, who seized the animal, drew a bag over his head and threw him into the river.

On the fourth day of the session of the Wisconsin Presbyterian Church Synod, Mr. PRESSON, a layman, startled his clerical friends with the opinion that each minister "ought to be able to support himself from the revenue of his own immediate precinct." The classic town of Mechanicsville, N. Y., has just emerged from an intense political excitement. At an election recently held there for Inspectors and Wardens, the voting population turned out en masse. Eighty votes were polled. There were two candidates in the field. One received seventy-nine, and the other one. Notwithstanding the very great difference in the vote, the beaten candidate claims to be the choice of the people, and is about to look to the Courts for "justice."

A fireman and his assistant endeavored to establish themselves on Saturday last, at a Long Branch Hotel, by drawing from the furnace some $40 worth of canceled City Treasury warrants, thrown there by a committee of two, who were so affected by the heat that they fled the house, without waiting to see their work accomplished. The firemen brought a hose to bear on the notes, rescued them from the flames, and was in the act of speculating on the prospects of a European tour, when he was pounced upon by a son of the proprietor, and by a simple turn of the wrist had all his hopes and plans put to flight.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

Affairs in Entre Rios—Continuance of the Oriental Revolution—Proposed Loan of Thirty Million Dollars—Cattle Plague—Terrible Murder of a Whole Family.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BUENOS AYRES, Tuesday, June 14, 1870.

Thanks to the energy displayed by the National Government in the question of Entre Rios, the insurgent forces have lost spirit, and are daily disbanding. Several more officers of lesser note have surrendered themselves and men into the hands of the Government, while LOPEZ JORDAN himself, with but a few hundred followers, is retreating toward the frontier. This result will do very much toward strengthening BARTOLOMEO'S Administration, which appears to be gradually restoring peace and prosperity to a country too long divided by faction and party strife.

ORIENTAL AFFAIRS.

At Montevideo, or more properly in the Oriental Republic, things still continue far from favorable to Government. ABAREYO seems to have things much about his own way. Ever since the 27th of May, that is, since the sharp encounter which ABAREYO had with the national troops under Gen. GENERO, at Repentino, Gen. BATTLA has remained in a state of inaction, which leads people this side to fancy that the national forces were badly defeated by the rebels. The Government cause has also been weakened by the withdrawal of MAXIMO PEREZ from its support. This celebrated leader has not joined the rebels thus far, yet his withdrawal from active service will do the Government little good. Another movement under MEDINA is reported from Entre Rios as about to take place in support of ABAREYO. Thus affairs are going from bad to worse. FORTUNATO FLORES, of infamous memory, joined CARABALLO as Colonel, but the Government has rightly refused to ratify the nomination, ordering the latter to send FLORES to Montevideo as a prisoner.

IMPERIAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Turning from these resolutions toward more peaceful events, the most important subject which presents itself is a proposed loan of $30,000,000 to be negotiated in Europe. The object of this loan is to carry out several schemes of vital interest to the country at large, as follows: To extend the Central Argentine from Cordova to Tucuman; the construction of a port and harbor for Buenos Ayres, and one or two other purposes of lesser importance. There seems little doubt as to the certainty of effecting the loan, as Argentine credit is far firmer abroad now than it has ever been.

A CATTLE DISEASE.

Great anxiety is felt now among the cattle farmers, in consequence of a disease which has broken out in camp, threatening to spread and become general. The disease attacks animals in the mouth and feet, and, strange to say, up to date appears to be almost wholly confined to same cattle, thus spreading consternation among the butchers and milkmen, since the timid cows, whose name is legion, refuse to buy either milk or meat—whether with, or without reason, does not yet appear decided by the doctors.

A terrible crime has been committed not very far from this city, almost rivaling the recent tragedy in France. A household, consisting of mother, father, and three children, has been found murdered. Luckily, the assassins have been discovered and caught, though the chances of their being executed are small, owing to the somewhat absurd notions which prevail here regarding capital punishment.

FATAL DUEL.

Dueling seems to be just now the fashion. FLORENCIO VARELA, brother of Minister VARELA and of HECTOR VARELA, the Tribune's talented editor, was found lying dead in the woods of Palermo, shot through the heart, on the morning of the 9th inst. At first a murder was suspected, but investigation proved that he had been shot in a duel by a Peruvian officer, with whom he had some words the previous evening.

At last Americans have the means of direct communication with the States again restored under the British flag, and, though far from perfect, state letters can be only prepaid as far as Rio de Janeiro, is still far better that what we have enjoyed for six months, during which time it has generally taken two months in the transmission of letters.

PICKYUNE.

Ulrich, the Counterfeiter—His Attempts to Escape from the Ohio Penitentiary.

The celebrated counterfeiter CHARLES ULRICH, who has been for two years a convict in the Ohio Penitentiary, made a daring and well-nigh successful attempt to escape from the prison, on Saturday morning, about 3 o'clock. ULRICH was sent to the Penitentiary June 17, 1868, under sentence for twelve years of the United States Court for the Southern District of Ohio. He was confined in a cell on the long cell hall, and employed as what is known as the lake shop. On Saturday morning after Capt. CUNNINGHAM, Captain of the Night Guard, had made his midnight round and found everything in proper shape, as he supposed, Mr. BARRITT, one of the night-watch, rushed into the guard-room with the announcement that ULRICH had escaped from his cell, and could not be found. The Captain went at once to the cell, and found that the bolt had been drilled off. The guard on duty could give no information as to the where abouts of the prisoner. The Captain's instinct took him to pursuit at once toward the chapel. The door was locked, but he insisted that the key be sent for, and the door unlocked. He then ran quickly up stairs and discovered ULRICH in the act of climbing into the attic, through a trap-door or opening in the ceiling. He drew his revolver, ordered the man down and took him to the dungeon. This done, he waked Col. BURR, Warden of the Penitentiary, and informed the latter of the investigation of the case. The circumstance of the chapel door being locked, and the manner in which the cell door had been opened, showed there had been some assistance given the prisoner. The Warden went to the cell where ULRICH was confined, and had a long interview with the convict. He stated that he had been betrayed, and therefore had no hesitancy in making a full statement in regard to the affair. He said that he was assisted in his effort to escape by A. P. BARRITT and R. S. ROGERS, night watchman on the chapel hall. ULRICH had given these parties, in the country, and the guards had communication with him in regard to little jobs of engraving names for cards, &c. They secretly procured for him the necessary tools and lights, and he worked after hours in his cell, the guards acting as lookers and giving signals by the approach of the Captain or Warden, so that the light might be extinguished. This arrangement continued for some months. ULRICH doing many jobs and receiving pay for the same. The guards were to have received $2,000 for their assistance. They have been discharged by the Warden.

The Annual Report of the Commissioners of the New Prison at Sing Sing—Its Cost—Its Capacity—Its Management—Its Prisoners, Pay, &c.

From the Troy Times, July 19.

Yesterday witnessed the first day's real work, to ascertain the causes of WILLIAM P. KENNEDY'S death. The Coroner's inquest which at some time since could prove no person guilty of the alleged crime of murder, and upon the testimony of one DAVID A. BROWN, private detective, the family was arrested on suspicion of murder. The first witness yesterday, in lieu of voting district No. 3 in North Troy, was called. The excitement on this question has subsided, and the announcement of the commencement of the trial filled the room, a large crowd being unable to gain entrance. From the scant proceedings yesterday, it is quite probable that no new testimony will be elicited, and that Mrs. ANGELA and family will once more be acquitted in the eyes of the law, though they may not be able to ward off the suspicions of the community. The trial was presided over by Wm. W. EDDY, Trial Justice for that County. Mr. JOHN TURNER appeared as counsel for the State. Mr. NICHOLAS YATE, of Troy, for Mrs. ANGELA and Mr. EDWARD C. AMES for Hacky, the Irishman who was accused. The heat of the day made it very irksome for all parties, and all will no doubt be very glad to have some sort of a termination to the affair. The case was opened by Mr. JOHN TURNER, counsel for the State, who read the complaint against Mrs. ANGELA and family.

Mr. VAN SLYCK said that by a recent law county was required for costs. Formerly it was not the case, but it had been seen that it was for the interest of trial justices to require this. He said that if this charge had been made we would investigate, the County would have saved the examination. There must at the Coroner's inquest, which had been held a long time, have been evidence to the death by the hand of some person, and the County should be relieved from the expense of the trial.

From the Troy Times, July 19.

Yesterday afternoon the Commissioners of the Sing Sing Prison, Messrs. ROBERT ROSE, JOHN MCCORMICK and ALEXANDER CAMERON, with their Secretary, Mr. ROBERT ROSE, Jr., visited Troy, and spent the time from 2 to 5 P.M. in the Prison, examining the books, and making a thorough inspection of the institution. The Commissioners have been in office but a few weeks, and have made a thorough inspection of the prison, and have found it in a very good condition. The Commissioners have found the prison in a very good condition, and have found it in a very good condition. The Commissioners have found the prison in a very good condition, and have found it in a very good condition. The Commissioners have found the prison in a very good condition

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Normal College—Corporal Punishment.

The New-York Board of Education met at 4 P. M., yesterday, President SMITH in the chair. The sum of $47,120, appropriated for the construction of a Normal School, was transferred to the account for the maintenance of the Normal College. A resolution was adopted, thanking Mr. JAMES KELLY for his offer to give a gold and silver medal to the best and second best graduates of the Female Normal College and Training School, and accepting the same.

Mr. WOOD said that during his visit to the public schools he had found one room in the school-house No. 34 Elm-street so pestiferous that he could not remain in it, although it is occupied daily as a class-room; and he would offer a resolution calling the attention of the Health Commissioners to the nuisance in the neighborhood of the school-house, and ask for its removal. The resolution was adopted.

A requisition was made on the Controller for the sum of $50,000 for the erection of suitable buildings for a Female Normal College and Training School.

A report was received from the Committee on the Normal College, stating that the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund have, as authorized by law, set apart the lot of ground bounded by Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth streets, Fourth and Lexington avenues, as a site for a Normal College and Training School. The report recommends that the site be accepted. The report was adopted.

Mr. WOOD asked when the Committee on By-laws would be able to report on the question submitted to them—the substitute of some form of punishment in place of corporal punishment.

The Chairman of the Committee said he had no doubt the Committee would be able to make their report before the reassembling of the schools. The Board then adjourned.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Closing Exercises at Grammar-School No. 37.

The closing exercises of Male Grammar-School No. 37, in Eighty-seventh street, near Third-avenue, Mr. WM. A. OWEN, Principal, were held yesterday afternoon. They consisted of chorus and solo singing and declamations on the part of the pupils, who acquitted themselves in a very satisfactory manner. The school, in which nine teachers are employed, registered 355 pupils during the past six months, while the average attendance was 302. Semi-annual testimonials of merit for regular and punctual attendance, correct deportment and industry in study were distributed among 135 pupils, viz.: To 34 of the first degree having 95 per cent. average marks, to 34 of the second degree having 90 per cent. average marks, and to 15 of the third degree having from 80 to 90 per cent. average marks. From the first class of the school one of 26 pupils the large number of 20 were admitted to the College of the City of New-York. The exercises were attended by a fair audience, chiefly ladies. Mr. JOHN STRAITON, Chairman of the Board of School Trustees of the Twelfth Ward, conducted the exercises, which were attended on the part of the school authorities of this City, also by Mr. Wm. H. WEBB, Assistant School Superintendent; Dr. EUGENE BODE, Inspector of the Seventh School District, and DAVID KNAPP, School Trustee of the Twelfth Ward. Rev. Mr. SHACKELFORD and Mr. JONES delivered addresses to the pupils, both approving and encouraging.

Closing Exercises of Male Grammar-School No. 29.

The closing exercises of the male department of Grammar School No. 29, in Greenwich-street, took place yesterday morning, and were attended by a large number of the friends of the public schools in the First Ward. Among those present were Hon. HENRY KIDDLE, City Superintendent of Public Schools; Prof. NASH, music teacher in the schools; the trustees of No. 29, Messrs. Baldwin, Disch, O'Connor, and Bergner; Inspector Slevin, Capt. Dolan, Mr. Keenan, Mr. Holmes, and others. Mr. C. P. BERGNER, one of the trustees, presided at the exercises, and P. G. DUFFY, principal, and THOS. E. CODY, his first assistant, conducted the programme of exercises. The exercises consisted of singing, recitations, dialogues, solos, duets, choruses, &c., and were performed with great credit to the pupils. Among the pieces deserving of special mention for their excellence, were a Salutatory, by Master C. C. MULLER; Recitation, "Sheridan's Ride," by C. WILLIAMSON; "The Newsboy," by EDWARD CONLEY; "The Maniac," by J. CRONIN; "I Would I were not a boy again," by BERNARD CRUSE; Duet, by McKENZIE Brothers; Solo, by Miss ARDE A. WRIGHT, one of the teachers. "The Carnival of Venice," performed by CHARLES FAUST; "Fun at Price," by JAS. GHILDOY, and the valedictory by M. COHEN. At the conclusion of the programme, Superintendent KIDDLE presented about twenty certificates of merit to the pupils, and a gold medal, the gift of Hon. NICHOLAS MULLER, to Master MICHAEL CRONIN, the scholar who stood highest in scholarship and general conduct. In prefacing the presentation Mr. KIDDLE complimented the scholars of No. 29 for the skill and proficiency shown in the exercises of the day, and said he had been much gratified in witnessing the good order and decorum that prevailed among the pupils. In his opinion Grammar School No. 29 would compare favorably with any of the up-town schools. Brief addresses were made by several of the trustees, and the school closed for the term.

A Judicial Refusal to Recognize Cuba—A Loan for the Sake of the Lone Star.

In the case of LOINEZ vs. QUESADA, a motion was yesterday made, before Chief-Justice BARBOUR, in the Special Term, Superior Court, to have the defendant's answer stricken out as "false and sham." The facts of the case, which have been already published, are briefly as follows: The plaintiff alleges that while residing at the City of Nassau he lent to the defendant, Gen. QUESADA, $1,500, to be used in the cause of the Cuban revolt, which sum he now seeks to recover. The answer denies the receipt of the sum claimed, and sets up extraneous matter showing that the transaction, if it did take place, was had under the jurisdiction of Great Britain, and that the money was given to levy war on the Government of Spain, with which the Government of Great Britain was then at peace, and therefore an action for the recovery of the money would not lie. Also, that Gen. QUESADA was now on his way to the United States as an accredited Ambassador of the Cuban Republic, and is therefore without the jurisdiction of the United States Courts. Judge BARBOUR said the Court was bound to take judicial notice that Cuba was not a Government recognized by the United States, and therefore any accredited Ambassador therefrom could not be recognized as entitled to the privileges accorded to representatives of recognized friendly nations. He further held that the only answer available in the case was a denial of the loan of the money, and this having been set up, in order that the demurrer be effectual it must be proven that the answer is both "false and sham." In respect to the plaintiff had failed, and the motion to strike out must therefore be denied, with costs. An order was made accordingly.

The Morrison Bond Case.

Justice DOWLING held an examination, yesterday, in the case of J. CROSS NELSON, accused of complicity in stealing $150,000 worth of bonds and stocks from the office of MORRISON, SON & HUTCHINSON, No. 307 Broadway, in November, 1869. The effort was made yesterday to trace the source whence NELSON received the two $5,000 bonds negotiated by him; but little progress being made, the Magistrate closed the case, and announced that he would hold the accused for trial in $10,000 bail. As the necessary security was not forthcoming, the prisoner was remanded.

The Thomas Bond Case Decided.

In the case of GILBERT W. THOMAS, the Broad-street broker, who ran away with $82,000 worth of Kansas Pacific Enfirced Mortgage Bonds, which he had pretended to purchase from DAHNEY, MORGAN & Co., of Exchange-place, Justice DOWLING decided, yesterday, to fully commit the accused for trial as the General Sessions. The case has had several long examinations since THOMAS' arrest, a few weeks ago. The Magistrate fixed the amount of bail at $50,000, which was not furnished, so the prisoner went back to his cell.

Desperate Attempt at Incendiarism.

Yesterday morning about 2 o'clock a fire which was evidently the work of incendiarism was discovered on the third floor of the unoccupied three-story building, No. 4 Mulberry-street, owned by MYER HOSENTHAL, and before it was extinguished the premises were damaged to the extent of $200. The theory of incendiarism is founded upon the fact that the owner and house are at law about the rent, and that just before the fire was seen explosions were heard in the building. Fire-Marshal McFARLAND began investigating the case at once, and speedily obtained indisputable proofs of the crime which had been attempted. There were two explosions—one on the second, and the other on the third floor—and in a small room on the third floor was found a package of powder saturated with kerosene, with a gunstick of matches and a remnant of a burned fuse. Powder was spilled about in various places, and a bottle which had contained kerosene was found in the midst of a lot of loose straw in the same room.

The building is leased by CHARLES JANSEN, of No. 4 Roosevelt-street, and the suit referred to is between him and ROSENTHAL. The building is insured for $4,000 for the benefit of a mortgagee, but this phase of the case does not appear to be fully developed as yet. Fire-Marshal McFARLAND is still engaged upon the investigation.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

The Forged School Fund Warrant—Opinion and Finding of the Arbitrators.

The case of the Board of Education against PETER B. SWEZEY, Chamberlain, &c., which excited some public interest when first brought before the Supreme Court, has now been decided by the Board of Arbitrators, to whom it was referred, in favor of the officers of the Board of Education. The following is the statement and decision of the arbitrators:

The proceeding was brought on behalf of the Board of Education against the City Chamberlain for the purpose of compelling him to credit the Board of Education with the value of a check, or warrant drawn on the City Chamberlain, purporting to have been signed by J. M. MCKEAN, the President, THOMAS BOOTH, the Clerk of the Board, and SAMUEL R. H. VANCE, the Chairman of the Finance Committee, and to be payable to the order of J. A. D. COLLINS, or bearer. The matter has come before the Court on a writ of mandamus, and has been referred to us. It was finally admitted by counsel, that the warrant was forged, and the question remained, whether the plaintiff, who had received the money for the amount of the forged check, from the Board, was entitled to credit for the payment. It appears by the evidence that the forged check was presented to the proper officer of the Board, on the 1st April, 1869, and was paid by him; that on the 11th of May, 1869, it was delivered among the checks which had been returned by the Chamberlain, and was immediately returned to the Bank as a forgery. The Bank then put the matter into the hands of detectives, and offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the parties concerned. It appears by the evidence that the forged check was made by one COLLINS, who was a clerk in the office of the Board, and who was generally known to have payment to make, which he published to be due him from the Board, and that the forged check was made in the name of J. D. COLLINS, or bearer. The Board claim that they were generally known to have payment to make, which he published to be due him from the Board; that the Board had never caused work to be done in any school building in West Twenty-third-street, and that the work in the school building under charge of the Board, and that the work in the school building, No. 703 having been reached on the day of the forgery, for which warrants purport to be issued to the forged check, McMAHON, BOOTH and VANCE, all testify that their names upon the check are forged, and a number of experts also testify that the signatures, as well as the filling, are not genuine and apparent forgery, and that both were filled in by one over. On the part of the defendant it was claimed that the Board had allowed the claim twice, and that after the check was returned to them it was lying on the table of the Board, and that the paying teller, in the confusion, had forgotten who had identified the person presenting the check; also, that the employees of the Board were in their usual habit of signing drawing checks. The case has now been decided by the arbitrators in favor of the Board of Education, and the following is the award:

NEW-YORK, July 14, 1870.

Messrs. Moses Taylor and Thos. Hillhouse, Referees:

GENTS: I have carefully examined the papers submitted to me in the matter between the Board of Education and the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank. There seems to be no question as to the forgery, and I is of opinion that on the ground of negligence, there is nothing to justify shifting the loss from the Bank to the Board of Education. I do not deem it necessary to give any detailed opinion.

GEORGE F. TALMAN.

We fully concur in the above.

MOSES TAYLOR.
(Signed) CHARLES F. LEVERICH.

For the Board of Education, E. E. SCHMUCKER and WILLIAM E. CURTIS. For the Chamberlain, BROWN, HALE and VANDERPOEL.

Robinson, Cashier; Third Division—H. M. Williams; Fourth Division—Geo. W. Embree; Fifth Division—John Hydecker; Sixth Division—Wm. H. Morris; Seventh Division—N. M. Gaylord; Eighth Division—D. H. Tompkins; Ninth Division—S. G. Clarke; Castle Garden Bureau—C. S. Tenis. This morning at 10 o'clock Collector MURPHY will take formal possession of the Custom-house, relieving Mr. GRINNELL, who will take a brief vacation until the 1st proximo, before assuming the duties of the Naval Office.

The Normal College and Training School.

In answer to an advertisement of the Committee of the Board of Education on the Normal College, fifteen plans for a building suitable for College purposes were yesterday handed in to the Committee. That of Mr. C. ARTHUR TOTTEN was adjudged by the Committee to be the best, and a premium of $1,500 was awarded to him. The awards for the second and third best plans were not made.

Mr. TOTTEN's plan places the principal front of the building on Fourth-avenue, with the Training-school in the rear, and facing on Lexington-avenue. The chapel, capable of accommodating twelve hundred persons, stands between the two buildings. The style of architecture is that known as Modern Gothic, and which admits of very free treatment. The material of which the College will be constructed is Ohio freestone and pressed brick. The estimated cost is $600,000. The site chosen for the College is the plot of ground bounded by Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth street, Fourth and Lexington avenues.

The Buckley Homicide—McCarroll Committed.

Coroner KEENAN concluded an inquest yesterday in the case of BARTHOLOMEW BUCKLEY, who died in Bellevue Hospital on the 20th ult. from a fracture of the skull, sustained at the hands of JAMES MCCARROLL six days before, by his being struck in the head with an ax. The prisoner resided in a shanty in Fortieth-street, near Tenth-avenue, and the deceased and his wife resided with him as boarders. MCCARROLL on the day in question, was intoxicated, and made some insulting remark about Mrs. BUCKLEY, which enraged the deceased, and he called MCCARROLL a rascal, at the same time seizing a small shoe-knife. Both men clinched, and the deceased was felled by a blow on the head with an old ax. Mrs. BUCKLEY testified yesterday that her husband had got away from MCCARROLL, who came up behind him and dealt Mrs. BUCKLEY the fatal blow. The officer who arrested the prisoner stated that MCCARROLL told him at the time, that the deceased had assaulted him with a knife. The prisoner in his statement claimed that BUCKLEY had stabbed him in the head and leg while he lay on the bed, and that he acted in pure self-defense. The jury rendered a verdict against the prisoner, and the Coroner remanded him to the Tombs, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

BOARD OF POLICE.

Important Rules Adopted—Transfers and Retirement.

At a meeting of the Board of Police, yesterday, a number of additional rules were made for the government of the Department, of which the following are important, and are of interest to the public:

RULE.—The Captain will at all times when in command, (day or night,) call the roll and designate the posts, and at the time will the Sergeant on duty call the roll or designate the posts when the Captain is present. Any violation of this rule by a Captain or Sergeant will subject him to complaint and punishment.

RULE.—It shall be the duty of the Sergeant in command of the Station-house to take on the Roll at the precise time when the Captain, Sergeants and Roundsmen leave the Station-house to patrol the Precinct or on other duty, and at the time of their so leaving, and also the precise time when they return, and at the time they so return. Any Sergeant or Sergeant willfully disobeying this rule, or who shall make any false entry in the Roll, in relation to the matters herein specified, shall be reported to the Board.

RULE.—The Sergeant on duty will note on the register the precise time when the Captain leaves and returns to his quarters, and the Sergeant, and at the expiration of his following tour of duty shall report the same.

RULE.—It is the duty of the Sergeant on patrol to do so duty with his section or platoon, to remain out during the tour, to see that the Patrolmen of their respective beats are in their beats, and to report the violation of the rule by any detailed will subject him to dismissal.

Sergeant DAVID W. NOIRE, of the Eighth Precinct, was transferred to the Fifth, and Sergeant JOHN F. MALONEY was transferred from the Fifth Precinct to the Eighth. A large number of patrolmen were appointed, and PETER HARDER, patrolman of the Sixteenth Precinct, was retired on a pension of $500 per annum.

Delinquent Patrolmen.

Commissioner MANIERRE, yesterday, investigated forty-nine charges against patrolmen. The Grand Roundsmen, as usual, furnished the majority of the cases, but the cases appeared to have become more efficient or circumspect, as their complaints do not now develop so many flagrant dereliction as formerly. With few exceptions, the offenders they had detected and reported were so venial as merits and be awarded only nominal punishment.

The complaints of drunkenness were more numerous than usual. In one beginning the case of MARTIN BRAUN, of No. 3,205 Third-avenue, who charged Patrolman JACOB BOSUNE with improper conduct, seemed to have a firm basis. He alleged that BOSUNE came into his beer saloon by a side door after 1 o'clock in the morning, and behaved in a disorderly manner. The officer, however, said that the lights were all burning, and a party was engaged in playing cards, when he went in and told BRAUN it was time to close. Whereupon that individual locked the doors, and called upon his companions to assist in turning up the officer. Eventually, he said, BRAUN and his friends taken to the Station-house, and next morning, being arraigned at the Harlem Police Court, was put under bonds to keep the peace.

The New-York Cotton Exchange—A Constitution Adopted.

A well-attended meeting was held by cotton merchants of this City, at the office of Messrs. DUPAIS & WALTERS, No. 8 Beaver-street, yesterday afternoon, in order to take action for the establishment of a Cotton Exchange in this City. Mr. S. D. HARRISON presided over the meeting, and Messrs. SEYMOUR M. BEST and J. H. BRADY acted as Secretaries. By-laws Committees, appointed for the purpose before, reported, and a constitution and by-laws were reported. The preamble, setting forth the reasons for instituting the association, reads as follows:

Whereas, The cotton trade of New-York is increasing in importance, and the facilities for handling and shipping cotton by steam to all parts of Europe, this port is now enabled to compete with any other, and are long, one of the largest cotton ports of the world, and

Whereas, In addition to the cotton sent here for sale, there has grown up a large trade in the purchase and sale of cotton for future delivery, in which much business is done on the cotton exchanges of the planters and country dealers in the South, and

Whereas, We believe that the telegraphic wires all over the world will rapidly increase and extend, and

Whereas, It is essential with this increase in the cotton trade of New-York that proper rules and regulations should be adopted for conducting the business, which can only be adopted and carried into effect under an organization of all the trade, it is determined by those of us present, and such others as will unite with us, to organize an association under a constitution and by-laws.

The constitution was, after some discussion, adopted. Its principal provisions are as follows:

The title of the association shall be "The New-York Cotton Exchange." The officers of the association shall consist of a President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Secretary, and Board of Managers. All persons who are permanently engaged and of good standing in the cotton trade of this City may become members, on payment of the initiation fee, and on a majority of the Board of Managers. The initiation fee shall be $250 for members of two years' standing, and $500 for those of less standing. The annual dues shall not be considered as expended until the constitution is signed by no less than one hundred members.

After the preamble and constitution had been adopted, it was resolved that a committee of fifteen be appointed to solicit subscriptions to the association, and that when sufficient signatures shall have been made, to hold another meeting for the adoption of by-laws and for permanent organization. The meeting then adjourned.

Crimes and Casualties.

JAMES FITZGERALD was arraigned before Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs, yesterday, for a felonious assault upon CHARLES JANSEN, of No. 4 Roosevelt-street. He smashed CHARLES' door with a lager-beer keg, and struck him on the leg with a shank, and was beating him on the head with a bale-stick when arrested. The Magistrate held the fellow for trial.

Coroner SCHIRMER will hold an inquest today on the body of JOHN SCHNEIDER, aged SIXTY, who hung himself, yesterday, in his shanty, on Fifty-fifth-street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues. The cause of the rash act has not yet been ascertained.

Coroner KEENAN held an inquest, yesterday, at No. 261 West Thirty-fifth street, over the remains of GEORGE IRVING, aged four years, who died of injuries sustained by a fall through an upper window of his parents' residence.

A verdict of accidental death was duly rendered.

A colored boy, yesterday morning, fell from a horse at the corner of Seventh-avenue and Twenty-third-street, and being kicked by the animal, was severely injured. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital in an insensible condition.

The New United States District-Attorney—His Installation.

Mr. NOAH DAVIS, successor to Mr. PIERREPONT, United States Attorney for the Southern District of the State of New-York, was yesterday installed in his new position before Judge BLATCHFORD in the United States District Court.

Mr. PIERREPONT, who introduced Mr. DAVIS said: If your Honor please, I wish to present to the Court Hon. NOAH DAVIS, who has been appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the Senate, as my successor to be Attorney for the Southern District of the State of New-York. I hold in my hand his commission, which I present to the Court, and he is here ready to take the oaths required by law.

Judge BLATCHFORD received Mr. DAVIS' commission, and then formally administered to him the oath of office. A record of the commission was directed to be entered in the minutes and the proceedings terminated.

The Chess Congress at Baden Postponed.

The grand meeting of the chess celebrities of the Old World, which was to have been held on the 15th inst., has been postponed, owing to the impending war between France and Prussia. It is to be hoped, in the interests of humanity, that the war will be averted, and that the Congress will soon be enabled to name a day for the commencement of peaceful and bloodless hostilities.

Attempted Suicide at the Auburn Prison.

From the Auburn Daily Advertiser, July 12.

ASHER ATKINSON, committed to jail July 5, in default of $1,000 bonds to keep the peace, on complaint of his wife, attempted to commit suicide, at noon to-day, by cutting the artery of his left arm, opposite the elbow joint. He had procured a common jack-knife and sharpened it to a keen edge, with which he bled himself to death, but, failing to reach the artery, succeeded only in severing the two principal veins usually bared by physicians in bleeding a patient. Becoming somewhat faint from loss of blood, and probably relenting from his deadly purpose, the would-be suicide raised an alarm and attempted to staunch the wound, which was about an inch in length, by applying a compress torn from his bedding. Drs. SHAHAN and SLOCUMB were called in and found the suicide lying on the floor of his cell in a pool of blood. Restoratives and bandages were applied and the patient removed to a clean cell, where he will soon recover.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

The North German Parliament was opened yesterday by the King in person, who made a speech on the absorbing question of the day, of which the following is the substance. The King disclaimed for Prussia any interest in the election of Prince LEOPOLD to the Spanish throne, except that peace might be restored to a friendly people. This had furnished the Emperor of the French a pretext for war unknown in the annals of diplomacy, and he had indulged in language towards Germany which could only have been prompted by a miscalculation of her strength. He would say in all reverence, for the event was in God's hands, that Germany was strong enough to resent such language. He had weighed the responsibility of the man who drove two powerful and peaceful nations into war and havoc. The rulers of France had shrewdly touched the sensitive pride of that nation, and, for selfish ends, were misguiding it. In conclusion, he said they should fight for liberty and their rights as their fathers had done, and God would be with them in a struggle without which Europe could have no lasting peace. The Parliament then voted the loan of 120,000,000 thalers unanimously, amid the wildest enthusiasm. The dispatches represent the utmost harmony and unanimity as prevailing in the German States. Germans in the service of the French have been ordered to return forthwith. The Prussian Government has announced that even the enemy's merchantmen will not be interfered with on the high seas, unless for causes which would subject neutrals to seizure. The Adjutant-General of Hanover has been arrested by the Prussian authorities as a spy. The Frankfort Gazette declares the people have no interest in the approaching struggle; it is one of sovereigns altogether. A London dispatch says Germany makes the dethronement of the BONAPARTE dynasty the ultimatum of Germany. A traveler on the Rhine represents the German soldiers as quiet, grave, anxious and resolute, while the French are boisterous, drinking and swaggering. A Swiss General was recently arrested in Prussia. The answer of Prussia to Switzerland's declaration of neutrality is delayed purposely, it is said. Complaint is said to come from BISMARCK over the dilatory movements of the Landwehr. Arrests of spies have been made on both sides of the Rhine. An amusing theory for the war is current in Berlin. It is ascribed to the failure of the Empress to marry her niece, the Duchess of ALBA, to Prince LEOPOLD. The father of this lady is described as an impecunious and despicable resident of Madrid. In the Corps Legislatif, yesterday, the Duc DE GRAMMONT made another announcement regarding the declaration of war, in effect that the French Chargé d'Affaires in Berlin had been instructed to notify the Prussian Government that France had resolved to seek with arms the guarantees she could not obtain by discussion. He also stated that a state of war had existed since the 19th between France and Prussia. La Liberté says that an agent has gone to Florence with a treaty of alliance between France and Italy, and that if Denmark joins France the Orleans Prince will enter the Danish army. Some citizens of the United States residing in Paris have held a meeting with a view to organizing a sanitary commission similar to that in existence here during the late war. Mr. WASHBURNE, who was absent in Bohemia, yesterday returned to Paris, on hearing of the declaration of war, and was yesterday in consultation with several of his diplomatic colleagues. The warlike enthusiasm is unabated in France. The Bourse is still declining. No reports of fighting, on sea or land, have been received, and it is now asserted that although skirmishes have occurred between outposts and Customs officials, "not a gun has been fired." Prince NAPOLEON will go to the Baltic, it is rumored, with a land force, to co-operate with the French fleet in occupying Hanover. The Italian Government, as a precautionary measure, has called into service two classes of the reserve forces of the kingdom. The Turkish Government, according to a Vienna dispatch, has also called out the reserves, and has stopped telegraphic communication in all directions. No authentic information has yet been received in London of any Power having taken sides with either belligerent. A demonstration was made, yesterday, in Dublin in favor of France, and an immense procession paraded the streets, displaying the French and Irish flags, until they were dispersed by the Police and their banners taken from them. A slight improvement in the English markets was perceptible toward the close of the day, yesterday.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

In the High Court of Justice in France yesterday a scene occurred between the Procureur-General and the counsel for the prisoners, growing out of the latter addressing one of his clients as Monsieur, to which the Government lawyer objected. He demanded that the counsel for the prisoner should be removed from the Court, upon which all the lawyers for the defense threw up their briefs and withdrew.... One-fifth of the deaths in Paris, last week, were from small-pox.... A London dispatch says the family of Mr. DICKENS has refused $2,000 for the manuscript of Edwin Drood.... Don CARLOS has arrived in Geneva.

GENERAL.

The new French Minister to Washington, M. PREVOST PARADOL, committed suicide at 1 A. M. yesterday, by shooting himself in the region of the heart with a pistol. He left a note in the following words: "I shall kill myself. M. BERTHEMY, come back and stay." He had purchased a brace of single-barrelled Remington-pattern pistols the day before, one of which he used in destroying his life. An inquest will be held, which may throw some light on the causes which led to this sad event. The predecessors of M. PREVOST PARADOL, M. BERTHEMY, who was in this City, has gone to Washington to take charge of the French Legation. The son and daughter of M. PREVOST PARADOL, had been sent to Newport, whither their father intended to follow them in a few days. The Secretary of State, yesterday, telegraphed to Mr. WASHBURNE, who is to inform the French Government of the death of the new Minister, and the President has given orders for a guard of honor over the remains, and any other attention that may be required.

The conductor and engineer of the accommodation train, and the conductor of the mail train on the New-Hampshire Northern Railroad, have been indicted for manslaughter in causing the death of the engineer of the mail train in the collision on that road July 12. They will be tried at Lebanon, N. H., and warrants for their arrest have been issued.

A Danville, Va., dispatch published in Richmond, yesterday, says that many citizens of Caswell County, N. C., have fled for safety from Col. KIRK and the North Carolina State troops. Six aged citizens had been hanged by KIRK's men, and was carried off on a litter by his sick friends yesterday morning. Arrests of prominent citizens continued to be made by KIRK.

The Secretary of the Treasury, yesterday, opened the bids for the exclusive privilege of catching fur-seal on the Islands of St. George and St. Paul, Alaska. The lowest bid was $55,000, which amount was bid by several firms, and the highest was estimated at $327,000 per annum, offered by the American-Russian Commercial Company, and TAYLOR & RENDLE, all of San Francisco.

A Richmond, Va., Court, yesterday, decided that the violation of the election law in one ward of the city vitiated the recent municipal election, and that another must be held.

The Committee of the Georgia House of Representatives on the Penitentiary, yesterday, reported on their new system of convict labor that it works better than the old, and is similar to that prevailing in Northern States. A resolution was offered that no election be held until the Georgia Representatives have been admitted to Congress, and that all Election laws unamended to the present condition of the State be repealed. Both branches of the Legislature adjourned till Friday.

The Term of the United States District Court set down for Aug. 16, in Buffalo, has been postponed to Sept. 13, and all business is to stand over.

The Hudson River State Hospital will be ready to receive thirty or forty patients by Sept. 1, it is said.

The United States steamers Narragansett and Calhoun are to be immediately fitted for sea, under orders from the Navy Department.

The Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Fenian Brotherhood in Philadelphia has issued a call for a convention of the "Irish nationalists of America irrespective of past differences or organizations," to be held Aug. 22, in Cincinnati, to adopt such measures as will promote the cause of Irish independence. This is in view of the possibility that Great Britain may be involved in the European war.

The gold market was not very much excited yesterday, except in the morning, over the news of the suicide of the French Minister and the report of a naval battle on the Rhine. There is little change to note in the Dry Goods market, but in Produce there was a decline in flour and wheat.

Collector MURPHY swore in the Deputy Collectors yesterday, and will take his seat in the Custom-house this morning.

An immense meeting of Germans was held last evening at Steinway Hall, at which resolutions denouncing NAPOLEON, and calling upon all Germans to uphold the Prussian side of the conflict, were adopted. Speeches were made by Ex-Gov. SALOMON, Senator SCHURZ, O. OTTENDORFER, SIGISMUND KAUFFMAN, Dr. A. DONAI and Gen. FRANZ SIGEL.

The New-York Liberal Club held its fortieth meeting last evening. Mr. F. G. FAIRFIELD read a paper on the "Scientific Basis of Orthodoxy," and the subject was afterward discussed by the members.

Prussia and the War.

The King of Prussia, in his speech to the North German Parliament on the opening of the session, alluded to the war as a struggle "without which Europe can never be at lasting peace." This is a very candid commentary on the situation. The policy of Prussia being what it is, and the interests of France being what they are, war was inevitable. Even if it could be averted now—and nothing short of a miracle could do it—the contest would have to be fought out at some future time. Two very ambitious Powers are anxious to take the leading place in Europe. We do not now say which we ought to sympathize with. That is a matter of feeling and of opinion. What we have to deal with is the fact that the war has been as clearly foreseen by Count VON BISMARCK as by the Emperor NAPOLEON. It is nonsense to say that NAPOLEON has taken Prussia unawares. BISMARCK laid down a course of action which it would require years to complete, and he has been steadily pushing on his plans, well knowing in what quarters he would provoke opposition. First of all, Austria had to be cleared out of the way. That was a matter of no great difficulty. But that was not the end. France had grave interests at stake, and it was only a question at what point of BISMARCK's design she would step in and interfere. Perhaps the Prussian Minister did not anticipate that the Spanish plot would be the critical move—more probably he did foresee it, and determined to provoke the unavoidable conflict on that very question. He has not been caught in a trap. He knew very well that a war with France would complete his great project of "German unity" by bringing over the South German Confederation in a body—and he was content to take the risks of a war as the price of this advantage.

"Not Prussia alone, but the entire German nation, rises in its full majesty against the audacious man who presumes to trample nations into the dust to gratify his princely lust." Such is the language of the preamble to the resolutions passed last night at the meeting of the Germans held in this City. The "audacious man" is, of course, NAPOLEON III. In other quarters the opinion is confidently expressed that the result of the war will be to extinguish NAPOLEON. That looks simple enough on paper, but it is among the peculiarities of NAPOLEON that he is not easily "extinguished." It is in his favor at present that the French people are at his back, not to mention the possibility of Austria and Italy likewise ranging themselves on his side. The support of England is counted upon for Prussia—no one can say with what justice, for the foreign politics of England are always a muddle. England went into a costly war for the purpose of maintaining a Mohammedan Prince in Europe. She gave her sympathies to the Southern States at a time when it was very necessary for her future well-being that she should have supported the North. She looked on and saw Denmark crushed, notwithstanding that a Danish Princess is to be the future Queen of England. No one would be surprised if she now decided to make deadly enemies of her nearest neighbors and her most powerful ally. Prussia would receive her aid, and leave her to settle her own score with France.

We are told that the cause of Prussia is the cause of liberty. It may be so—we do not propose to go into that question at present. But BISMARCK was not always above making terms with despotism. It was only the other day that liberty of speech and of the Press was suppressed in Prussia. When the war against Austria was decided upon, it has been stated, and never contradicted, that BISMARCK promised the Emperor MAXIMILIAN the Rhine Provinces as the reward of his neutrality. The bargain is said to have been concluded at Biarritz. The Emperor has waited for the fulfillment of the contract, and, instead of getting his promised spoils, he has seen Prussia endeavoring to extend her protecting arms beyond the Pyrenees. We say nothing of Hanover and the Elbe Duchies, for, after all, they were German. But there is such a document as the Treaty of Prague in existence, and instead of fulfilling the stipulations it involved BISMARCK has treated it with derision. These are among the causes of the war which historians will have to consider, and which we may as well keep in sight now. We commend the Germans here and elsewhere for the patriotic spirit they are displaying. From their point of view they are quite in the right. They pursue a course which is highly honorable to them—only outside observers may be permitted to recognize the truth that some excuse may be made for the present feeling of the French people. The two great intriguers of the age are now standing with crossed swords. We as spectators may sympathize with which we please, but the fact remains that both are seeking territorial conquest. The lust of power is not confined to either side. Nothing is easier than to predict the overthrow of NAPOLEON. After him, however, France will survive. And before she can be overthrown, we must expect a war on a scale which even this blood-stained century has never seen surpassed.

M. Prevost Paradol.

An eminent man has passed from the world. We are accustomed to admit without much reflection, that we live in an exacting age, but we never realize so fully the stress which the duties of life place upon us as when we see the energies of a finely-tempered mind sink under the effort to keep pace with their manifold and ever-changing requirements. A great intellect carries with it penalties as well as advantages, and the men who sit analyzing and reflecting, though apparently removed above the din and turmoil of the passing hour, are really the most painful partakers of its troubles, and the earliest victims of its absorbing demands. They go on working until the overwrought system breaks down. Very few understand them, and consequently few have any sympathy with them. It is not until all is over that even the intimate friends of the victim perceive that he had many trials and crosses in his lot, many thoughts and sorrows which they could not share. "The heart knoweth its own bitterness"—and of no human being is the saying more true than of the earnest thinker who, no matter what his surroundings may be, practically leads a lonely and solitary life.

LUCIEN ANATOLE PREVOST PARADOL adds another to the many examples which our generation has furnished of death from an overtasked brain. Born in Paris on the 8th August, 1829, he had almost completed the forty-first year of his age. At twenty-two he gained the Academy prize for eloquence, and at twenty-six he took the degree of Doctor of Letters, and was appointed to the Chair of French Literature at Aix. After holding this position for a year, he entered on that brilliant career of journalism, which but a few weeks ago appeared to have been only temporarily interrupted in order that it might give place to the responsibilities of diplomacy. The Débats, the Press and the Courrier du Dimanche employed in turn his trenchant and vigorous pen. He wrote, besides, a multitude of treatises on political and social questions, and added from time to time to his early critical and historical essays in general literature. He was almost alone among Parisian writers in the command of a correct and copious English style. Last year he made his appearance as a lecturer in English before the fastidious public of the Scotch metropolis, and subsequently he wrote a series of letters to the London Times, which, under the heading of "From a Parisian Correspondent," excited much attention and comment. In 1863 he made his only attempt to enter the Corps Legislatif by contesting unsuccessfully the seat for the Sixth District of Paris. In 1865 he obtained the distinction, dear to French litterateurs, of being elected a member of the Academy.

In politics, M. PARADOL was an Orleanist. His ideal of a free Government was that of a constitutional monarchy, with ministerial responsibility and popular suffrage. Before Imperialism became tempered by the liberal reforms of the past year, he was an uncompromising opponent of the Empire. His attacks upon the régime, as administered by M. ROUHER, caused the prosecution of the Courrier du Dimanche, and his treatise on "Political Parties of the Past," cost its author a month's imprisonment and a fine of one thousand francs. His appointment to Washington was looked upon by the Imperialists of the old type as a reward given to a laborer who had come in at the eleventh hour, at the expense of those who had borne the heat and burden of the day. His immediate political friends, albeit accustomed of late to witness the admirers of the Comte DE PARIS take office under the Empire, regarded his acceptance of an Embassy as, to some extent, a breach of political faith.

For years M. PARADOL has been an overworked man. The multiplicity of his published works by no means adequately represents the full measure of that mental activity which for sixteen years has scarcely ever known a respite. Leaving France at a time when no ripple of the coming storm disturbed the apparent political calm, he may not unreasonably have hoped to recruit a constitution which had been impaired by the imperious demands of modern journalism. He came among a people to whom his appointment was a compliment, and of whose appreciation he had already received numerous tokens, only to find that the military spirit which he had so often denounced was again about to be dominant in Europe, and that the Empire which he had brought himself honestly to trust and respect, was again looked on with suspicion by many whom he esteemed as friends of liberty and civilization. He was nothing if not sincere, and the strain of journalism found a counterpart in the new and complicated responsibilities which he was called upon to meet as Minister of France at Washington. It was most unfortunate for M. PARADOL that he encountered our silly season, the most trying season of the year. A concurrence of circumstances which could not be foreseen has brought a noble life to a premature close. We sympathize with all in France who mourn over the loss of a man who would have done honor to the literature of any country. To perish thus in a foreign land, after a hard life's work, is indeed a melancholy lot. A great career was still before M. PARADOL, but in a moment life and reason fell together. We lay the plan of our lives, and suddenly we awake to the knowledge that all is irrevocably changed—or our survivors are left to gaze upon the fragments of our unfinished work. The French journalist who lately came among us was still a stranger here, but his sorrowful fate will awaken deep regret in every mind, and the causes which led to his death will not be misjudged.

The South and the Democratic Party.

The Southern politicians who pride themselves on a dogged refusal to accept the situation, begin once more to be heard in the land. They desire the North to understand that they have not passed out of existence. Reconstruction has neither extinguished nor converted them. They are as full of sound and fury as in the olden time, and quite as ardent in their attachment to the Democratic Party. The latest voice comes from Alabama, and from an oracle no less renowned than the Mobile Register. The mission of the Register, just now, is to preach "courage, not despair." It is hopeful and defiant. "Even within three months," it says, "the black cloud of the Radical storm of power and persecution begins to break and lift;"—an utterance which is afterward elaborated in more explicit terms:

"There are hopes of their (the Republicans) defeat today that few dared indulge in three moons ago. We see that party torn and distracted within itself, jealousies and heart-burnings doing their accustomed canker work upon its corrupt vitals; their President a miserable failure, equally incapable of a decent administration of the great trust confided to him, and of keeping his own party in harmony and cohesion. Beyond that we see the people from ocean to ocean giving out the strongest manifestation of impatience and discontent; the great white man's Democratic Party coming again to the front, organizing for victory and winning victory, in almost every State, and county, and town where elections have been held. We see the most powerful of the states, New-York, pronouncing her emancipation of the Radical Administration and her claim for Democratic restoration in the Government, in the emphatic tones of a popular majority of 100,000 votes. We have seen Tennessee re-enfranchised by the efforts of her people, Virginia and Georgia nobly making the fight against Radicalism, and still holding their own, and in every renewed conflict gaining something on their enemies."

Therefore the Register bids the irreconcilables of the South to take fresh heart, and prepare for efforts worthy of the cause. "The great white man's Democratic Party" is held up to their admiration, and in its success they are told to look for deliverance from the changes wrought by reconstruction. The counsel is not given at random. The Register knows quite well the purpose of the Democracy,—that "White Man's Party" which remains as it was when FRANK BLAIR was chosen the exponent of its hostility to all that the Republican Party has accomplished at the South.

There is an appositeness in these declarations which adds to their significance. Before leaving Washington, the Democratic Senators and Representatives deemed it prudent to suggest moderation on the part of their followers throughout the country. "Dead issues" were to be kept out of the coming campaign. "Minor matters" were not to be allowed to distract the party. Adroit partisans, like the World, applauded the sagacity of the recommendations, and interpreted them as equivalent to the acceptance of negro suffrage, and the whole work of the Republicans in reorganizing the South. We pointed out at the time the untenableness of this version of the Democratic story, and the insincerity which pervaded it. We showed that had the Congressional Democrats intended to abide by reconstruction as a finished work, they would have averted controversy by saying so. Whatever they intended to convey in their address, we may learn from the Mobile Register how that document is understood by the Southern Democrats. They do not acquiesce in negro suffrage, let the World say what it may. They do not accept reconstruction as an accomplished fact. They do not concede the validity of the Fifteenth Amendment. Nor do they classify these questions among the "dead issues" and "minor matters" of the day. On the contrary, they are resolved that these questions shall be reopened at the earliest opportunity, which will occur whenever the "great white man's party," the Democracy, regain power. It is of no avail for the World to assure them that any success which its party has achieved in New-York has been made possible by moderation. The Democrats of Alabama are too familiar with the hidden springs of their party to be so deceived. They accept nothing—will acquiesce in nothing. Only war upon reconstruction will satisfy their great desire—only that will enable them to restore the "white-man's-government" theory, which the war and the Republican Party have ruthlessly overthrown.

As the Democrats are in Alabama so are they in Kentucky. No reconstructed Government harasses them in the latter State, but they witness negro suffrage, and gave declared war against it. The Louisville Courier-Journal protests that they should be wiser,—but in vain. They will not move a hair's breadth from the ground assumed by the party, in national convention assembled, two years ago. FRANK BLAIR's letter still expresses the hostile purposes and the disorganizing policy of the great body of the Democratic Party.

Our Navy.

It is to be regretted that Congress did not, before adjournment, adopt some measures calculated to increase the efficiency of the navy. The war between France and Prussia renders it important that our European, South Atlantic, and other squadrons should be strengthened, but the number of sailors allowed by law is so small that no new ship can be placed in commission until some other goes out. The Guerriere, now lying at the Brooklyn yard, was ready to go to sea two or three months ago, but still cannot leave for want of a crew. For the same reason the Practice Squadron, which sails from Annapolis this year with the Naval Cadets, will go with one or two ships less than usual. It is in consequence of this actual need of sailors that the exaggerated report found currency that Vice-Admiral POREE had asked for eighteen thousand men. He probably said he wanted eighteen hundred men, and a suitable appropriation for equipment, construction, &c., as he would thereby be enabled to send to sea six vessels of the Guerriere class, which would be enough to supply our present requirements. But the enlistment of these men, and the expenditure necessary to fit out the required ships, can only be authorized by Congress. We have good ships and experienced officers. Under ordinary circumstances, there should be little difficulty in increasing our present naval force from eight thousand, its present number, to eleven thousand men.

Although during the rebellion we maintained a strict blockade of the Southern ports, and by the construction and use of monitors did so much to modify and change the character of modern naval warfare, it is surprising that some of the vessels built during or since that period are equal to those built before it. Our twenty-seven double-enders were costly failures, and the Government has wisely sold as many of them as it could find purchasers for; while the machinery has been taken out of the rest, and the hulls have been used for coal barges or some such purpose. So, too, the light-draught monitors, about twenty in number, which are still borne on the Navy Register, although practical failures, might as well be sold for old iron. Even the more pretentious cruisers, like the Madawaska (now the Tennessee) and the Wampanoag, (now the Florida,) will need to be extensively altered before they can be well suited for use as war vessels. Several of these were built of white instead of live oak, and could not, therefore, be expected to last very long. In fact, the vessels built during the war may generally be classed as nondescripts, or as experiments which did not prove successful. A ship of war must fulfill a number of conditions, none of which can be slighted with impunity. It must carry a sufficient battery, must have good accommodations for the crew, must have abundant room for stores of all kinds, as well as coal, and must be so rigged as to make good speed under sail, even though supplied with steam as an auxiliary. An experiment was made when Mr. ISHERWOOD was at the head of the Steam Bureau, of building a number of fast cruisers, which were to be of the Alabama type, and for capturing such adversaries as depended, not on heavy batteries, but on escaping from a conflict with their superiors in strength. These new vessels had powerful engines, and developed a respectable rate of speed, but their machinery occupied so much space that little was left for berthing the men or even for storing provisions. The highest speed they attained was about seventeen knots, and yet Admiral DUPONT had done as well in the Minnesota, years before, when that vessel was his flag-ship in China.

But we need not further allude to the mistakes of naval constructors, for there yet remain many vessels in our navy of which we may well be proud, and which are fitted to make our flag honored wherever they may carry it. When we built the Merrimac, the Colorado, the Minnesota, the Wabash, and other frigates of that class, they excited the admiration of the world, and England, ever prompt to recognize improvements in naval architecture, endeavored to copy their models. They contained all the improvements of their day, and as to battery power and stowing of the crew and supplies, they have never been excelled, while they attained excellent speed by the use of sails and a screw propeller, which could be tried up when found unnecessary. Our sloops-of-war, of the Lancaster class, were also very fine specimens of their grade, while the eleven-inch pivot guns they carried forward and aft made their battery unusually formidable. These vessels, although not fitted with absolutely full steam power, could still log an average of nine knots an hour, with a consumption of twenty-four tons of coal a day. The Iroquois class of smaller sloops were also weatherly and fast ships of their kind, and were consequently of great value.

The classes of vessels just enumerated formed the best part of our naval service before the war, and most of them can again be made available. Vessels like the Madawaska require, it is true, many changes in their rigging and internal arrangement, but with proper alterations they can be used to advantage. It is generally conceded that our navy is at present not in an efficient a state as that of a first-rate Power, such as the United States should be; but if the necessary supplies can be authorized, and the enlistment of the required number of men be ordered, it will not be long before we shall have afloat and in commission a sufficient number of vessels to support the dignity of the United States in every quarter of the globe.

An Extraordinary Invention.

A foreign journal informs us that patents have been taken out in England for an invention which seems to the untutored imagination about as substantial as the philosopher's stone or perpetual motion, and much less so than a controllable machine for traversing the air. The name of the alleged inventor,—Mr. BESSEMER,—makes the statement appear still more surprising. The discovery is nothing less than "a series of inventions for rendering the passenger accommodation of vessels independent of their external motion," so that sea-sickness is to become obsolete, not in the British Channel only, where the experiment is first to be tried, but all over the world. These inventions, we are not surprised to hear, "have for some time attracted attention and curiosity in the scientific world," although it is certainly somewhat astonishing to find that they "are said to be regarded with great confidence by such of its leading members as have been made acquainted with the details." However, as a screw-steamer on the proposed principle is now, at Mr. BESSEMER's expense, in course of construction by Messrs. MAUDSLEY & Co., and is expected to be ready before the end of November, our doubts are likely soon to be resolved.

There are, without doubt, some ways in which an approximation can be made toward rendering anything on board a ship "independent of its external motion." One of these is that in common use for shifting racks, another that employed for water-beds, a third—and this is very rough—is exemplified by the common swinging hammock. But neither of these devices can be said to be independent of a vessel's external motion. On the contrary, they are all more immediately and precisely obedient to that motion than anything else on board, and for this very reason the movement is more gentle and tolerable, on the principle familiar to those who are at home in the saddle. But absolute independence of the surge and sway of old Neptune is as impossible as for a rider to be independent of his horse, or a balloon of the air. It would nevertheless be delightful, especially for sufferers by sea-sickness, to be convinced of the practicability of Mr. BESSEMER's invention; and even if it prove to consist, as we suspect, of only some ingenious mechanism, it may be at least as useful as creosote, camphor, and the other remedies which promise relief and give none.

The best of the Madrid journals—those, we mean, which deem truthfulness an essential quality in all news—quietly protest against the promulgation by the Spanish authorities of statements in regard to the Cuban insurrection which have no foundation in fact. They remonstrate, moreover, against the professed confidence of the officials in the approaching termination of a conflict which really seems no nearer its close than it was twelve months ago. With her workmen crying for bread in the streets of her capital, Spain is not in a condition to expend treasure and the lives of her soldiers in fighting for an island which is already practically lost. A frank confession of the truth might be mortifying to the national pride, but even that would be preferable to the continuance of a costly struggle, with a certainty of final failure. If, as PRIM is reported to have said, "the independence of Cuba is only a question of time," why encounter constant risk and aggravated embarrassment before recognizing the inevitable?

If New-Jersey law is correctly interpreted in the Orphans' Court of Essex County, the married women of that State may reasonably complain. A Mrs. ROSS, who had for some time lived apart from her husband, died, leaving personal property, which by will she gave to another. The husband resisted the operation of the will, and the Judge sustained his pretensions, on the ground that the law relating to the subject does not enable a married woman to devise her personal property without her husband's consent. New-Jersey, then, must take its place by the side of Connecticut in the dark corner of the Union. The right of a woman to hold property, personal or real, and to dispose of it as she pleases—subject only in the case of real estate to a restriction in the husband's favor, equivalent to the right of dower—scarcely needs argument in these days. Where, as in the instance just reported, the personal property is the result of a woman's enterprise and labor, with no help whatever from her husband, the injustice of his claim to its control becomes iniquitous.

Revolutionary leaders everywhere are on the lookout for the "chances" which war in Europe may be expected to afford. NAPOLEON may be no more inclined to keep French troops at Rome than in Algeria; and in the absence of French soldiers from Rome, the Garibaldis of Italy would have an opportunity too good to be neglected. Should Austria enter the contest, the Kossuth element will reappear in Hungary. There are Poles in New-York who really imagine that war contingencies may revive hope for the "fair land of Poland," whose partition has not even yet extinguished the patriotic ardor of its people. Of course the Fenians watch eagerly for England's participation in the fray. We have already published "military orders," only dated at Fenian head-quarters, and JOHN MITCHEL, while warning the readers of the Irish Citizen against "military swindlers," cannot conceal the wistful glance which he casts in the direction of France. The "military swindlers" who have excited his wrath pretend that any combination of Powers which shall embroil England would serve the Fenian purpose. JOHN MITCHEL insists that his hated enemy must be the enemy of France, or there will be no opportunity for the Irish Nationalists. He does not happen to be an authority among the Fenians, however, and we shall not be surprised to hear that the great army which was to have invaded Canada is under orders to prepare for landing on Ireland's shores.

The World, the other day, arraigned the Republican policy of reconstruction, and the Republican Party in general, because of alleged extravagance in South Carolina since the readmission of that State to the Union. It was a far-fetched argument, and, withal, inconclusive. The Government of South Carolina, since its reconstruction, has been administered under difficulties. All things considered, we wonder not that it has not worked better, but that it has worked so well. But why has the World passed in silence the much more formidable indictment which the Frankfort Commonwealth, in the name of the people of Kentucky, prepared against the rule of the Democratic Party in that State? "Violations of the State Constitution," "increase of the State debt," "corruption in State administration," "legislative rioting in times of pressing business,"—these are a few of the charges that are preferred against the Democracy of a State which they govern without check or hindrance.

Louisiana planters, in their eagerness to secure more labor, have imported colored field-hands from Virginia, at an expense per man of about sixty dollars. The New-Orleans Times, which describes the agency employed for the purpose, states that the experience of the planters is not encouraging. They are called upon to pay too much out of their pockets before seeing the men, a majority of whom have been found unfit for work on the sugar plantations. Chinese labor is suggested by the Times as a substitute, and arrangements are reported which look a little too much like preparation for a coolie system. The "importation of Chinese laborers from California" is the plan proposed, but that implies the previous importation of the laborers aforesaid from China. A three-years' term of service is the basis of the proposed arrangement; wages, fourteen dollars, coin, per month, with board and quarters, subject to deductions of various kinds. It is said that contracts upon these terms "can be made with responsible parties in California." What is the answer of the President to the inquiry of the Senate touching the non-enforcement of the law in cases akin to this?

Minority representation gains ground, theoretically, at least. Its introduction in the Constitution of Illinois secures for it the fairest trial it has yet obtained, and the results of its working there will be an object of study to every thinking politician. A movement is on foot to elicit and educate public opinion on the subject in Pennsylvania, and we anticipate similar efforts in other States. Any relief to minorities from this method of reform will be slow, especially while the reform itself remains more or less experimental. What is most needed in this country is a more generous recognition of the claims of minorities in legislative bodies. One of the worst evils with which we have to contend arises from that despotism of the majority which is shown in the exercise of power without reference to the feelings or interests of the minority. We too often carry out the idea that the majority may do as they think proper, regardless of the effect of their action upon others. The cultivation of a more enlightened temper in Congress and in State Legislatures would cleanse politics from a demoralizing influence, and secure a more consistent respect for the principles which underlie our constitutional system.

There is a very striking sketch of Mr. DISRAELI in the "Editor's Easy Chair" department of Harper's Magazine, for August. The writer is certainly not a thick-and-thin admirer of Mr. DISRAELI, but he proves that he understands the man and his position, and has not taken his opinions at second-hand from DISRAELI's political foes in England. The following remarks are singularly true and just: "His genius is alien in England. He is essentially lonely in the country which he has ruled, and all whose prizes that he sought he has seized. He is a consummate artist in politics and literature, and therefore in many ways inscrutable. It is true that his Toryism is suspected; but it would be very remarkable if he were not a Tory. He abandoned the traditionary policy of his party—but it was to save his party. The English Liberals did not, and do not, trust him. Why should they? In this very book he flouts and insults them. And if the Tories suspect that he is satirizing them—is it their fault?"

Seldom has an investigation, into which partisanship entered, ended so satisfactorily to an accused individual as that conducted by a committee of the Georgia Senate into the official conduct of Gov. BULLOCK. The charges preferred against him in connection with the administration of the State finances were freely employed to his disadvantage during the reconstruction discussions at Washington. How unjust were the imputations directed against him, the conclusions arrived at by the Georgia Committee clearly prove. There are two reports, majority and minority, and both acquit the Governor upon all allegations affecting his integrity. The majority declare that "nothing has been disclosed or established which tends in any manner to impugn his motives or his personal and official integrity;" and the minority, while deprecating as unwarranted in law a certain exercise of his authority, confess that the evidence fails to establish any suspicion of corruption on his part. What was intended to crush the Governor will react in his favor.

The Liberal Club—Mr. F. G. Fairfield on the Scientific Basis of Orthodoxy.

The New-York Liberal Club held its fortieth meeting last evening, at No. 22 Third-avenue, President WARNE in the chair. Notwithstanding the heat of the weather, and the hotter tumult of war in Europe, quite a number of gentlemen and some ladies were present to listen to a paper by Mr. F. G. FAIRFIELD, on the "Scientific Basis of Orthodoxy," and to discuss sundry abstruse questions. Mr. FAIRFIELD reviewed COMTE, HERBERT SPENCER and Mr. FISKE, of Harvard, and contended that Positivism, as interpreted by its apostles, did not cover the historical psychology of humanity. COMTE, he said, had admitted the validity of the religious instinct, but had expunged from his system the supernatural element, which was nothing more nor less than a corollary of the struggle of man in the direction of ultimate material freedom. He contended, therefore, that any system of philosophy which involved the necessity to reject one-third of the whole body of history, could not bear criticism. The question of the relation between orthodoxy and philosophy had become a question as to the rejection of the supernatural element in history. The subject was necessarily divisible into three parts, namely: First, the necessary interpretation of history. Second, the necessary definition in biology, and thirdly, the necessary historical interpolations. He made no difference in the argument whether the theistic idea was admitted to have any objective validity. The question of the existence of God was a question which did not concern science. The literary body of history could only be accounted for by the postulation of three fundamental instincts or directions of the human mind. The first was the theistic instinct, whence the theistic idea; the second, the thought instinct, whence the first solution of philosophy; the third, the art instinct, whence the body of artistic creations, emotive of poetry and music. There was no more reason to reject the historical validity of the theistic instinct, than there was to reject that of either of the other two; and if the validity of it was admitted, then orthodoxy must be held to be based upon valid psychological grounds. The speaker proceeded to identify the ideas, as defined by COMTE, with the system of bibliographical science, and to examine the relation of the aesthetic perception to the beautiful in nature. A description of the pretensions of Positivism as the successor of theology succeeded, and was concluded with the declaration that COMTE's pretensions in this respect were not valid. The second part was devoted to the evolution of a definition in theology of sufficient scientific scope to cover the theological idea. Mr. FAIRFIELD concluded by assuming that "Life is the struggle of matter to realize itself in consciousness," upon which, in his opinion, a valid philosophy of religion might be based.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

SUICIDE OF M. PREVOST PARADOL.

Melancholy Termination of a Brief Diplomatic Career—Circumstances Attending the Sad Event.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20.—PREVOST PARADOL, the new French Minister who arrived here last week, and was received by the President on Saturday last, committed suicide at 1 o'clock this morning by shooting himself with a pistol. He had been very busy since his arrival, and yesterday his mind seemed wandering, though he continued to give attention to business during the afternoon. It is presumed that he was laboring under a temporary fit of insanity caused by fatigue and the intense heat. The facts will probably be brought out at the Coroner's inquest.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

The French Minister shot himself in his sleeping chamber, the front room of the second story, and the circumstances attending it show that the act was premeditated. The inmates of the house at the time were his house-keeper and a French serving-man. The woman heard the report of the pistol and rushed to the room, where she found M. PARADOL lying dead on the floor, bleeding from the left breast, the ball having entered immediately over the heart. The weapon used was a small single-barrel breech-loading COLT's pistol, which was found on the floor under him. It is ascertained that he walked out yesterday and purchased a pair of pistols of the style described, and one of which he employed to end his life. The other was found upon his bureau with a cartridge beside it. The undertakers were sent for at an early hour this morning, but it was not generally known that the French Minister had killed himself until after daylight, as the servants were timid about going on the street at night in a strange city; and in fact, they seemed to be at a loss what to do. The body was embalmed by the undertakers and prepared for burial, but nothing further will be done until the arrival of M. BERTHEMY, the late French Minister, who is in New-York, and who has been summoned by telegraph. M. BERTHEMY will arrive here in the late train this evening or early to-morrow, and the funeral arrangements will then be completed. The body will no doubt be taken to France. M. PARADOL had prepared himself for bed, but had evidently remained up in his chamber for some time, meditating the act of suicide. He had nothing on but his night-shirt and slippers, and apparently stood facing the fireplace, and near the center of the room, at the moment he discharged the pistol. The body was found lying on the back, with one leg drawn up and the left arm outstretched above the head. The French Minister took possession of his house on Friday last, and on Sunday evening he sent his son and daughter, who accompanied him to this country, to Newport, R. I., intending to join them there in a few days to spend the Summer. He left a note saying:

"I shall kill myself. M. BERTHEMY, come back and stay."

The members of the French Legation are absent from Washington, with the exception of M. DE JARDIN, the Chancellor. That gentleman, as soon as he heard the sad intelligence, communicated the fact to Secretary FISH, who, after expressing his surprise and profound regret, suggested that a Coroner's inquest be held, to which M. DE JARDIN assented, and 7 o'clock this evening was designated by the Coroner for that purpose. The entire community is shocked by the event.

THE INQUEST.

An inquest was held this evening over the body of M. PREVOST PARADOL, at the late residence of the deceased. There were present, among others, besides the jurors, M. DEJARDIN, the Chancellor of the French Legation; M. BODISCO, First Secretary of the Russian Legation; Señor PATEZTAD, First Secretary of the Spanish Legation, and the Marquis DE CHAMBRUN. The jury, composed of citizens, assembled in the parlor where the body lay. The corpse was partly uncovered, showing a wound directly over the heart. The jury then withdrew to the upper chamber, in which the suicide was committed. M. DEJARDIN was the first witness examined. He testified that he was with M. PARADOL yesterday, on Pennsylvania avenue, and while walking together M. PARADOL told him he wanted to buy a pistol. M. DEJARDIN endeavored to dissuade him from doing so, seeing that he was nervous, but the Minister insisted on buying a pistol, and for that purpose went to SAVAGE'S, where one was purchased. On Monday the Minister wrote him a note, which was subsequently handed to him. He was about breaking it open, but was requested by the Minister not to do so, unless some accident should happen to him. After hearing of the suicide this morning at 5 o'clock, he opened the note. Although written on Monday it is dated July 21. The translation is as follows:

If any accident should happen, I pray M. DEJARDIN to attend, with M. BIGGS, and the Consul-General at New-York, M. DELA PLACE, to see that my family and servants are sent home. I hope that the measures to be taken will be facilitated by the friends that I may have made in the United States.

(Signed.) PREVOST PARADOL.

M. DEJARDIN said the valet today brought to him a note left on the table, which read as follows:

I kill myself. BERTHEMY come back and stay. P. PARADOL.

M. DEJARDIN, in answer to a question by the Coroner as to the mental condition of M. PARADOL, said the latter's mind appeared to be much affected by the heat.

MARY WALTERS, the house-keeper, testified that she had been in the dwelling since last Friday; had heard a noise every night, and had no rest from it; there was always something going on, whether by rats or not she did not know; at 1 o'clock she heard a pistol-shot; coming to the room she saw the Minister lying on the floor; she was much frightened; she saw him drew his last breath; she had brought vinegar and water to revive him; the deceased retired at 9 o'clock last night; he was not in the habit of locking the door.

AUGUSTE MERION, valet of PARADOL, who came from France with him, testified through Marquis DE CHABRUN as interpreter, that he heard the report of a pistol at 1 o'clock, and the voice of the Minister asking, "Do you hear, AUGUSTE." The valet answered, "I do hear; the noise is not in this house, but in the next one;" when he came into the room, PARADOL was standing up near the table, and not being able to support himself any longer, he fell down. The witness could not lift him up, and therefore let him lie on the carpet. Thinking the Minister had fallen in a fit, he called the housekeeper, and together they went into the kitchen to get vinegar and water. He lived about three-quarters of an hour after he was shot. He made only one sign during the last fifteen minutes of his life. The Minister did not say a word more after calling him. The night-shirt worn by PARADOL at the time he committed suicide, was procured and examined. Witness further testified that one pistol lay on the table with a ball near it, ready to be loaded. The other pistol discharged, was found under his body. It was stated that his valet, after the suicide, this morning, took the pocket-book, with money in it, and the papers and other articles of value, and delivered them to the Legation.

Mr. MANN, the undertaker, testified that Marquis DE CHABRUN's servant came for him this morning to attend to the body. He found the deceased lying partly on his right side, his right arm extended. There was considerable blood on his night-shirt. It looked as though he had tried to stanch the wound. The gas was burning when he entered the room.

THE VERDICT.

The jury rendered the following verdict:

That said ANATOLE PREVOST PARADOL came to his death at about 1 o'clock A. M. on the 20th day of July, in the year 1870. They further find that the cause of the death of the said M. ANATOLE PREVOST PARADOL was a gun-shot wound of the heart, produced by a pistol, discharged by his own hand, while laboring under a temporary aberration of the mind.

THE PISTOLS.

It appears apart from the testimony before the jury, that M. PARADOL visited SAVAGE's store alone yesterday evening and bought a second pistol, saying to the clerk, "I'll take this one as we have a pair. They are so handy," and putting his hands on his pantaloons' pockets, "they are no more trouble to carry them a pocket-knife." He then paid five $5 notes, new money, and left the store. Upon purchasing the cartridges in the morning it was evident he felt that little ammunition would accomplish his purpose, as he seemed dissatisfied at first to purchase a full box, saying that he only wanted ten or twelve; but, on being informed that a box could not be broken, he purchased the unbroken package. The pistols were breech-loading, imitation Derringer.

ACTION OF OUR AUTHORITIES.

The Secretary of State today telegraphed to Minister WASHBURNE, instructing him to inform the French Government of the sudden death of Mr. PREVOST PARADOL. The President, on the suggestion of the Secretary, has ordered a guard of honor over the remains of the deceased Minister, at his late residence, with such other attentions as may be required. The Secretary and the invited guests, anticipated much pleasure at the dinner which was to have been given tonight by the Secretary, in compliment to the late Minister.

PARADOL'S PECULIARITIES.

One of the foreign Ministers, who had for a number of years been a bosom friend of the deceased, in discussing the sad event of the death of M. PARADOL, stated today that he was subject to most ungovernable fits of temper, during which he entirely lost his self-possession, and committed acts of which afterward he had not the faintest recollection. In the opinion of the Minister referred to, it was doubtless in one of these fits that he committed the act of self-destruction. According to the same authority he left Paris under highly unfortunate circumstances. His friends had become seriously estranged from him on account of his political course, which, until of late, had been in warm opposition to the Emperor. He had, in fact, become such men as THIERS and FAVRE, whose antagonism to the war was such as to draw upon them the open hostility of the French populace; and this latter fact, announced to him at the same time as the formal declaration of war against France, had the effect of wounding sensitive nature to the highest pitch of excitement. A number of causes of a similar nature added to the attrition of his mental system, until the over-strained cords snapped asunder and he sought relief in suicide.

Some Particulars of His Last Days—His Peculiar Proceedings—M. Thiers, His Most Intimate Friend, Notified of His Death.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The suicide of the new French Minister, though wholly unlooked for, now causes those who knew him most intimately to recall much that was strange and inexplicable in his conduct during the past few days. He has been greatly affected by the heat, and in a highly nervous and excitable state; and several things which indicated his morbid purpose passed unheeded. He remarked to his servants, who thought the house which he had taken and fitted up was haunted, that he should not occupy it long. He addressed a letter to the Chancellor of the Legation, M. DE JARDIN, and handed it to him; and when somewhat surprised at the mode of communication the latter was about to break the seal, M. PARADOL told him not to open it then, but to wait a few days and he would let him know when to read it. He called upon Mr. FISH at the State Department, yesterday, and his manner was so strangely excited as to attract the Secretary's attention; so remarkably so, in fact, that when informed of the tragic event, Mr. FISH referred to M. PARADOL's condition during this interview, and said that the news did not greatly surprise him. M. THIERS has been for many years M. PARADOL's most intimate friend, and the sad occurrence was communicated to him this morning by telegraph. It is understood that the three children of the deceased are left nearly destitute, as he had little or no private fortune, and had not accumulated anything considerable by his literary labors.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

A Scene in the French High Court of Justice—The Counsel for the Prisoners all Withdraw from the Defense—Edwin Drood—Don Carlos in Geneva.

PARIS, July 20.—In the High Court of Justice, yesterday, M. FLOQUET, advocate of the accused, moved that fifteen of the prisoners be tried separately. Among the reasons on which he grounded his motion one was that these men had nothing to do with the affair of the bombs. In the course of his argument he called MEGY, one of the prisoners, "Monsieur," and was interrupted by the President of the Court, who pointed out that, owing to the grave offense with which the prisoner was charged, he should not be thus addressed. This interference of the Court occasioned a scene between the counsel for the defense and Procureur-General GRANDPERRET. The latter demanded that M. FLOQUET be ordered to leave the Court-room. Maître LAURIER, one of the counsel, then announced that he threw up his brief; other advocates did the same, and all the counsel for the prisoners withdrew from the Court-room....Of the total number of deaths in Paris last week, one-fifth were from the small-pox.

LONDON, July 20.—The case of EDMONDS, the Patent-office extortioner, was, yesterday, discussed in the House of Commons at some length. The Government firmly opposed the release of the accused....The family of the late Mr. DICKENS have declined the offer of £2,000 for the manuscript of Edwin Drood.

Bids for Exclusive Privileges Opened by the Secretary of the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Secretary BOUTWELL today at noon opened the bids in his office for the exclusive privilege of catching fur-seal on the islands of St. George and St. Paul, in Alaska, for twenty years from May 1, 1870. The following are the bids:

S. E. Morgan & Co., of Morristown, Penn., $75,000 per annum; Lazard Freres, of San Francisco, $96,000 per annum; J. Adams & Son, of Philadelphia, $105,000 per annum; Louis Goldston, of San Francisco, for Finckel & Co., the American Russian Commercial Company, and Taylor & Bendel, all of San Francisco, $55,000 per annum for the rental, and 62½ cents beyond the $2 fixed by law for the skins, and 50 cents per gallon for all the oil obtained from the carcasses, the killed of which, estimated at 100,000 seals would be killed every year, and two gallons of oil obtained from each carcass, would amount to $237,500 per annum; C. M. Lockwood, of Oregon, at $112,000 per annum; John Bennett, of Taylor & Bendel, at $150,000 per annum; Ottinon Hendricks, of San Francisco, $165,000 per annum; John H. Bradford, of New-York City, $76,500; the Alaska Commercial Company, $65,000; Talbot T. Fowler, of Washington, $77,000; Soliman K. Hammingham, of Terre Haute, Ind., $72,000; John M. Davidson, of Washington, D. C., $87,000; Thomas W. Sweeney, of Philadelphia; $111,000; and Louis C. Wolton, of New-York, $90,000.

The decision will be made at a future day. The following memorandum in reference to bids for the exclusive right to take fur-seals upon the islands of St. Paul and St. George, was read before the persons present at the opening of the bids at noon today:

First—The successful bidder will be required to deposit security within three days to the amount of $50,000, in lawful money or bonds of the United States, for the due execution of a contract agreeable to an "Act to prevent the extermination of fur-bearing animals in Alaska," approved July 1, 1870.

Second—It has been represented from the language employed in the act aforesaid that it was the intention of Congress to give a lease for one year to the Alaska Commercial Company. I think it proper to state before the bids are opened that the contract will be awarded to said Company if their proposals shall be not more than ten per cent less than that of the highest bidder.

Third—The contract will be executed under a responsible party acquainted with the business or skilled in kindred pursuits to such an extent as to render it probable that the contract will be so executed as to secure the results contemplated by the law.

Railroad Affairs in Philadelphia—The Erie Railroad Lease.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., July 20.—An election was held today by the stockholders of the Erie Railroad, to approve the new lease of the road by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Prior to the election a protest was presented on behalf of the Cleveland, Painsville and Ashtabula Railroad against allowing the Pennsylvania Railroad to vote on nearly 40,000 shares owned by that Company, on the ground that the new lease is in favor of the Company, and that the Company should not be permitted by its own vote to discharge themselves from the obligations of the former lease; 63,163 votes were cast in favor, and 2,117 against deciding the question of the new lease.

The Recent Massacre of Miners by the Indians—Our Foreign Mails—Consular Agents Appointed.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The following dispatch received at the Indian Office gives additional details of the recent massacre of miners by a war party of Cheyennes, which had previously been defeated in a battle with the Utes. From this, and previous communications, it seems that Gov. CAMPBELL acquits the Utes of blame, and thinks they warned the miners of their danger.

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, July 19, 1870.

Hon. B. R. Parker:

The party that went to North Park in search of the missing miners, have returned. In addition to the three heretofore reported, they found the body of one man named VAN DYKE, and the scalp of another supposed to be WILCOX. Letters written by VAN DYKE and found near his body, indicate that the Utes had ordered him away the day previous to his death. All miners have left the North Park. J. A. CAMPBELL.

OUR FOREIGN MAILS.

The first offer from parties proposing to carry our foreign mails on American ships was received by the Postmaster-General to-day, from Mr. CRANE, of New-York, who represents various persons who own ships they believe to be suitable for this service. They claim to be able and willing to contract for a weekly trip in addition to the three trips now performed weekly by the English lines. Mr. CRESWELL said he would encourage their enterprise to the fullest extent of his powers, and would give them both the sea and inland postages. The latter being a discrimination over the foreign lines which the law permits the Department to make in favor of American vessels. It is confidently expected that the arrangements will be completed for an American line to take out the mails on either Monday or Friday of each week.

APPOINTMENT OF CONSULAR AGENTS.

The President, to-day, appointed three Consular Agents, to supervise our European consular service, at a salary of $5,000 and traveling expenses. The appointees are Messrs. D. B. KEIM, of the New-York Herald; W. J. ARMSTRONG and R. B. DENNIS, of Ohio. Mr. KEIM is appointed for one year, and the others for four months. They are expected to start for Europe at once.

A MURDEROUS AFFRAY.

Shooting Over a Business Transaction—A Rich Land Agent in Virginia Shot Dead.

LYNCHBURG, Va., July 20.—Col. R. C. RANDOLPH, proprietor of the Piedmont Land Agency, a man of some prominence and large means, was shot dead today in a difficulty with LEWIS WIMBISH and JOHN WIMBISH, Jr. The latter received a slight wound in the head. Some months ago RANDOLPH sold to a man named MOS, of New-Jersey, the valuable Green Hill farm on Stanton River, belonging to Col. JOHN WIMBISH, Sr., for securities nominally worth $80,000. These securities are said to have proved worthless. Col. WIMBISH was attempting to recover the farm, claiming that the transfer was a fraudulent transaction. The immediate cause of the shooting was an insulting letter from RANDOLPH to young JOHN WIMBISH in regard to the controversy. RANDOLPH was killed in his office, receiving five wounds. The WIMBISHES have been arrested.

The whole number of deaths reported as occurring during the last year is 66, and the average age of the graduates of the Academical Department is 61 years. Of those in the Theological Department 17 were clergymen, 17 lawyers, 8 physicians, 7 in business, 1 teacher and 1 editor. The deaths are distributed as follows: In Connecticut, 20; New-York, 14; Massachusetts, 7; Pennsylvania, 4; Ohio, 3; Alabama, Illinois, Maryland, West Virginia, 2 each; and the remaining 10 in as many different States. The surviving graduates of the last century are, as far two graduates of the class of 1770, viz: Gen. JAMES TALLMADGE, Jr., of New-York City, born 1st September, 1776; Chas. of 1776, Timothy Bishop, New-Haven, Conn., born 26th October, 1777; Class of 1797, Rev. Charles Goodrich, Penn Yan, N. Y., born 1st April, 1776; Rev. Thomas Williams, Providence, R. I., born November, 1769.

The Executive Committee of the Society of the Alumni presented a statement as to the present condition of the University. The report refers to the new buildings and the existing need of more funds; the inadequacy of the salaries of the professors; the necessity for four new professors and four more tutors; the need of a larger benefactory fund, and the development of the elective system in the Academical Department. The state of the Sheffield Scientific School and the gifts to it during the year, shows progress and liberality on the part of its friends. The Theological Seminary has received $62,718, in addition to the $65,180 already acknowledged. These donations are for the new building now completed. The Medical Department has received $2,000 from Messrs. MONSON and IVES. The Law Department has received many valuable law-books for its Library. The Treasurer's report is a pleasant exhibit, and shows that the friends of the College are many and generous.

The Committee appointed at the last annual Alumni meeting, and consisting of Prof. PORTER, Wm. M. EVARTS, C. J. STILLE, A. TAFT, Prof. F. W. FISK, made their report as to whether any change in the constitution of Yale College was desirable. This was an important matter, and the debate following the reading of the report was exceedingly interesting. The whole question is simply this: Whether the Alumni shall be directly represented in the government of the College, and if so, how? Prof. PORTER read the report, which is in substance as follows:

"The Committee were of the opinion that if any change is to be made in the Corporation and can be effected by the agreement of the parties, the following arrangement is most expedient: Six graduates of the College shall be elected in the place of the six Senators who are ex-officio members of the Corporation, as fellows: At the first election six shall be elected, who shall be divided by lot into two classes, each consisting of three; the first class to serve three, and the second class to serve six years; at the expiration of the term of each of the classes three persons shall be elected in the places of those retiring, to serve six years, and thereafter, at the end of every three years three persons shall be elected to serve six years; provided that in case a seat shall become vacant by resignation or death, it shall be filled by election of the graduates at the next annual Commencement, and shall be held till the expiration of the term of the original appointee; my person who has received from Yale College the degree of Master of Arts in course, or any honorary degree, and shall have attained the age of thirty-five years, shall be eligible as a member of the Corporation, provided that he is not an officer of instruction in Yale College, or in any similar institution. Any person who has received from Yale College the degree of Master of Arts, or of Doctor of Philosophy, or any honorary degree, shall be entitled to vote in the election of members, and any person who has received from the same institution the degree of Bachelor of Arts, or of any of the schools, five years after receiving such degree. As to the more important question whether the proposed change, or any change, is desirable, the Committee express no opinion, for the reason that they are not agreed in opinion. They therefore leave it for the graduates to decide whether it is advisable to recommend a change, announcing the advantages of which the Committee hold a divided opinion. The Committee are unanimous in finding no reason to recommend this or any change for any special defect in the government or administration of the college. The necessity is imperative that the associated alumni, who meet at the annual Commencement, the several local associations which are organized at the great centers of population, the several classes who are united to the common mother by the strong ties which bind their members to one another,—should one and all devise and execute measures by which to receive and diffuse intelligence in response to the wishes and the wants of the College, by which they can be brought into active sympathy with the Faculty and the Corporation, by which they can diffuse a general sense of responsibility for the progress and development of the College, and can contribute to the common cause, their munificent endowments with honest words, and their humble gifts without hesitation. While the Committee hail the demand for the proposed change as a sign of an awakened interest and increased responsibility, they are unanimous in the opinion that more efficient and wide-reaching measures than the one proposed must be taken to enkindle the interest which is needed to be aroused, and the responsibility which must be acknowledged. They trust that the second or the second and third is adopted, some other more effective plan of organization will be devised, by which the graduates can be brought into a more active sympathy with the institution, and can exert their influence more efficiently in promoting its prosperity."

At the close of the reading of the report Mr. EVARTS spoke for a few minutes in favor of the report and against any change. The question was between a definite system with its defects and the beautiful unknown which existed in men's imaginations. He was of the opinion that when, through many vicissitudes and difficulties an institution had held its own, a change demanded strong reasons in its favor. If the political members do not form an efficient portion of the corporation, neither do they do any mischief. It formed a bond between the State and the College, which did no damage and was an element of strength as far as it went. He spoke of the disadvantages attending the proposed change, and feared it would produce jealousy among the graduates themselves. Judge TAFT spoke in favor of a change, but it should not be made without the concurrence of the corporation. Its object was solely to improve the College government and maintain its prestige over other colleges. He thought, also, that it was a very difficult question to decide. Dr. BUSHNELL thought it was worth something to have Senators in the corporation. Dr. BACON did not believe the State would readily agree to a separation. It was like a big dog with a fat bone, near by, which it seemed neither cared for, but you touch the bone and the dog bites.

Mr. EVARTS wished the difficulties of a change to be considered. Gov. HAWLEY spoke a few words, and Dr. GULLIVER referred to the complaints of old fogyism, and the evident desire to get rid of the clergymen in the corporation. He deprecated any such movement. Prof. TWINING made a few remarks, and Mr. KINGSBURY spoke at some length in favor of a change. Prof. PORTER read some resolutions, the consideration of which was postponed for a year, and, by a vote of 36 to 15, the Committee was discharged, which disposes of the question for the present. The officers were then re-elected, and the meeting adjourned.

ADDRESS BEFORE THE SCIENTIFIC SCHOOL.

In the afternoon, at 4 o'clock, a large audience assembled at the Methodist Church, to hear Rev. Dr. HORACE BUSHNELL's address before the Scientific School. The graduates and members of the Scientific School marched from the school to the church. Gov. ENGLISH presided, and in front of him were seated Ex-Gov. JEWELL and HAWLEY, Dr. McCOSH, President WOOLSEY and other gentlemen. Gov. ENGLISH made a few remarks giving a sketch of the origin and rise of the school, and hoping for its continued prosperity. Prof. GILMAN then gave some items of a business nature:

A subscription for the school was started last December. The amount desired was $250,000. During the past two months $70,000 had been received from New-York and New-Haven alone. The valuable Hillhouse mathematical library had also been purchased. The Novelty iron Works at New-Haven had sent a portion of a valuable collection of mechanical drawings. One important addition to the corps of instructors had been made, Mr. WM. P. TROWBRIDGE, of New-York, a graduate of West Point, having been appointed Professor of Mechanical Engineering. Mr. SHEFFIELD had also promised to give a large lot adjoining the school to the corporation.

Dr. BUSHNELL was then introduced and read an elaborate and able essay on the general subject of the new education. He alluded to the different theories prevalent at the time as to the true nature of a university. It was settled that there were to be two colleges—the academic and the new school of practical science suited to the times. We must always and forever go to the ancients in order to learn the mastery of our own tongue. He discussed the proper functions of the scientific schools. We must have as many kinds of schools as there were arts to be scientifically shaped. There existed now an absolute necessity for a school of science. After detailing at length some of the important results achieved by science, Dr. BUSHNELL stated that a new crisis was pending for nations now in this matter of scientific education. The speaker considered the question as to what such schools would do for the development of the mind. In the academical department the theory was that the study of the classics was the considered a liberal education. There was no patent way for the making of mind. College education is the dumb-bell method, a gymnastic method of teaching. Those who study for the lesson's sake are the drones and dullards, who are the results of the "liberal" education. Science is something second, those who are likely to be something. Again, short work is apt to be sharp work, while long work is often dull work. The argument in favor of the college method, because it required a long time, is, therefore, fallacious. It was a fault of the academical method that it did so little for the senses. One's mind is trained, but not their hands. So a man graduates a bungler, left-handed in both hands. The teaching of science in mere class lessons is the very worst method for the training of the individual. The science of things is best learned from things themselves. Every little of science does more spectacleship teach! The speaker then proceeded to show that there was no antagonism between the two systems of education, the collegiate and the practical, and then considered the objections to making a practical education of great importance. He did not fear that the new system would be followed by the truth was sure to triumph. In conclusion the speaker spoke of the advantage to character from a right study of practical science. Dr. BUSHNELL spoke for over an hour and a half, and was listened to with marked attention.

THE SARATOGA RACES.

Sixth and Last Day—Pompey Payne Wins the Purse for all Ages—Helmbold the Three-Mile Race—and R. B. Connolly the Consolation Purse.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SARATOGA, Wednesday, July 20, 1870.

This was the sixth and concluding day of the July race meeting, and a lovelier day could not have been desired. A refreshingly cool breeze from the distant Green Mountains swept over the course, and the pleasant temperature conduced to the unalloyed enjoyment of the racing sport. The attendance was again large, the grand stand being filled with a brilliant galaxy of beauty and fashion. The management of the meeting throughout has been unexceptionable, and the highest credit is due to the executive of the association. The starting, with one or two exceptions, has been satisfactory. Mr. CHARLES WEBSTER discharging the arduous duties of that position.

The racing itself was of the highest class of excellence, and afforded unbounded satisfaction to every one who patronized the meeting. In the first race Chillicothe came in first, but was disqualified for foul riding, having crowded on and cannoned against Pompey Payne in coming up the straight stretch in so palpable a manner, that the judges gave the race to Pompey and deprived Chillicothe of his place. The race was run in 1:57¾, which is a second and a half slower time than Pompey made in the same race last year. The three-mile dash was one of the most exciting races of the meeting. Four famous horses started: Helmbold, winner of the Westchester and Saratoga Cups; Crossland, one of the best distance horses that ever trod the American turf, and who had recently won at Fall Hill; Hilarity, winner of the Annual Sweepstakes at Jerome Park last Fall, and Fleet Molter, the winner of the four-mile-heat race over the Fashion Course, L. I., last Fall. Helmbold again proved himself the great racer we have always contended that he was, for he won this race in such easy style and fast time as stamped him above all the racers that have visited the American turf. The Consolation Purse was contested for by five horses, and was by the deceased suicide, Richard B. Connolly, whose trainer, Mr. A. TAYLOR, following up his double success with General Duke, (now renamed Judge Curtis) brought him to the post in fine condition, and, after giving him a bottle of the best whisky to supply him with a little Dutch courage to go the distance, had the satisfaction of seeing his publicly expressed confidence in him triumphantly realized for he won from end to end, in the easiest possible style, in the fastest time ever made at the distance, (2:10,) except by Harangueer over the same course.

FIRST RACE.

The first race was for a purse of $600, for all ages, one mile and an eighth, with seven pounds penalty for winners during the meeting. There were eight runners: Hilarity, Bishop Malone, Chillicothe, Sir Archibald, Monroe, *P

CONFLAGRATIONS.

Extensive Fire at Charlestown, Mass.—A Jute and Linseed Factory Destroyed—Loss $400,000.

From the Boston Herald, July 19.

The most extensive fire which has occurred in Charlestown since August, 1862, took place yesterday afternoon. At 4:50 o'clock an alarm was sounded from box No. 21, and the whole department quickly came to City-square, to find that the new building of the Tudor Company, who are heavy importers and exporters, as well as manufacturers, of tobacco, rice-meal, linseed-oil and gunny bags, was in flames. This building was completed last year at a cost of about $100,000. The main building was 60 by 90 feet in area, and four stories high, surmounted by a French roof. This stood facing Chalice River-avenue, and running back on a line with the Fitchburg road track. In the rear and adjoining was the boiler and engine-room, a one-story brick building, measuring 40x80 feet on the ground. The building was used for the manufacture of linseed-oil and gunny-bags, with its rooms arranged in the following manner: First floor, grinding and mulling the flax-seed; second floor, occupied by hydraulic presses, for pressing out the oil, which was conveyed by pipes to the tanks and coolers in buildings further down the avenue; third floor, used for weaving jute for gunny bags; fourth floor, jute spinning; attic, wool and picker-room. It was in this story per room that the conflagration commenced its destructive work. A bearing of one of the pickers became so heated that it communicated flame to the jute-dust which covered it and everything else in the room, and so the instant that the first spark appeared the flash throughout the room was instantaneous. So rapidly did the flame rush through the apartment that the female employes in it had only time to snatch a portion of the clothing which had been laid aside and gain egress from the building. We are glad to be able to record, however, that all got out uninjured. The building described was consumed, and only a few slight personal accidents occurred. Edward Boyle, a member of Bunker Hill Hose Company, had a remarkable escape from death. He was at the roof of the building at an early stage of the fire, when a gentle window fell upon him, throwing him down where he stood, and here again he was struck with a piece of hot copper across the back, and so injured that he had to be taken home. The wonder is that he was not thrown to the sidewalk forty feet below. Two members of Hose Company No. 3 narrowly escaped being crushed by a falling cornice, as they were standing on the railroad between the two buildings. John McEvoy, a member of the same company, fell down stairs and had an ugly cash cut over his left eye. Eugene Sullivan was run over by the carriage of Hose Company No. 1, and had his arm broken. One of the Navy-yard firemen was run over by a hose-carriage and his ankle broken.

By this fire about 300 persons, male and female, who were employed in the building, have been thrown out of employment. The loss of concern fall short of $400,000. The building itself cost $100,000, and the 400-horse power Corliss engine cost $40,000 before it was set up. Besides this the machinery used in the manufacture of oil and gunny cloth was worth fully $250,000. The loss on stock is trifling, as the linseed-cake on hand had been all shipped, so that there was but comparatively little remaining, and the gunny cloth in the rooms did not exceed 200 rolls. There was a loss also of a few thousands in the upper building, where the stock was damaged by water, and slight damage was received by the oil-sheds below. The insurance was $250,000. This, we were told by gentlemen connected with the establishment, is wholly in New-York and London offices. Others, however, say it is widely scattered, while we are assured that the Monitor Insurance Company of Boston has $2,500. The members of the Tudor Company are the heirs of the late Frederick Tudor, and Chas. H. Minot and Benj. F. Field.

Incendiary Fire at Allegheny, Penn.—A Rag Warehouse and Stable Destroyed—Three Dwellings Partially Burned—Narrow Escape of the Inmates.

From the Pittsburg Chronicle, July 18.

This morning, between 3 and 4 o'clock, a fire broke out in a stable belonging to James B. Jones, and located on the south side of Isabella-street, between Sandusky and Anderson streets, Fourth Ward, Allegheny. The fire was first discovered in the hay-loft, and had already obtained considerable headway. From the stable the flames communicated to a building used for storing rags on the west side of the stable, and also communicated about the same time to one of the Fourth Ward taverns, immediately adjoining on the east side. The tavern was also owned by Mr. Jones, and was built in the shape of a double L, with the main front on Anderson-street and the sides facing on River-avenue and Isabella-street. The extreme ends of the wing on Isabella-street were occupied as tenants by Mrs. Gould and Mrs. Robinson. As soon as the flames communicated to the house occupied by Mrs. Gould, they spread with the rapidity of lightning, and as the tavern and tenements were all under one roof, the entire building was enveloped in flames. In less than eight minutes after the alarm had been given, the entire Fire Department was in service; but so rapid was the progress of the flames, owing to the combustible character of the buildings and contents, that it was feared that the efforts of the firemen would be ineffectual in extinguishing them until the building was entirely destroyed. The main portion of the tavern building was saved, although the roof was burned and the wings entirely destroyed. The inmates of Mrs. Gould's house were awakened by the flames bursting through the rear windows, and had barely time to escape. The furniture of the tavern and other tenements were all removed, although in a damaged condition. At the time the fire broke out there was a pony, two mules and a cow in the stable. The mules and the cow were roasted alive, but the pony was rescued after having been severely scorched. All the buildings, as well as the mules and cow belonged to Mr. Jones. The owner is at present absent in the country, and we could not ascertain his loss. He is insured for a considerable amount. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, as no person had been in the stable since last evening. Some six weeks since, an effort was made to fire the same premises. But for the efficient services of the firemen, a most disastrous conflagration might have ensued, as Boyle's lumber-yard is immediately adjoining the stable, on the west side.

Incendiarism in West Virginia—A Vigilance Committee Organized.

The Wheeling (West Virginia) Register of the 15th inst., has the following: "The usually quiet City of South Wheeling is greatly excited over two attempts made by incendiaries to set fire to property there. Some time about midnight of Friday last, Sergeant Schulte saw a man moving very stealthily in the neighborhood of the wash-house in the rear of the residence of J. H. Hobbs, Esq., and he attempted to crawl up and capture him, but the rascal saw him and fled. The Sergeant then gave chase but the fellow was too fleet for him and escaped. An examination of the premises showed that the villain had selected a spot for his operations where he could get up a big fire in a short time, and that he had the kindling already to touch a match to when frightened off. On Saturday night an attempt was made to set fire to Wilson's saw-mill, as we are informed, and all the necessary preparations were made for a big fire. For some reason the torch was not applied. On Saturday night the citizens of South Wheeling held a meeting and appointed a committee with power to send for ropes and other fixtures, so as to make short work of the rascals if they should be captured. Measures looking to so much-to-be-wished a consummation were perfected. We trust they may be successful."

The New Water-Works at St. Louis—Completion of the Reservoirs.

From the St. Louis Dispatch, July 16.

When, in the month of December, 1867, work was begun on the new reservoir at Bissell's Point, it was anticipated that the undertaking would be completed last October. Delays, however, arose in consequence of not obtaining stone, but the work has at last been brought to a successful termination. The reservoirs at Bissell's Point were completed early this week. Each one of them is 300 by 600 feet, with a depth of 21 feet. The floor, or bottom, is 20 inches thick, built of timbers filled in with concrete. Upon this floor there is concrete 12 inches thick, above which there is a brick floor 9 inches thick. Two reservoirs were finished about a year ago. The contractors were Messrs. T. M. Hagerty & Co., the contract price being $460,000. The storage reservoir on Compton Hill, corner of Grand and Lafayette avenues, was completed on Monday evening, when the last stone was laid. The contractors are Murphy, Henderson & Co., and the contract price was $400,000. The reservoir is 296 feet in length, 296 feet in breadth, as measured along the top of the inside slope. The bank is separated by a division wall 12 feet thick at the base, and 26 feet in height. There are two entrances at either end, one for inflow and the other for the flowing out of water. In the division wall and chambers there are about 5,000 cubic yards of rubble masonry; about 6,000 cubic yards in the slope paving the reservoir, and 30,000 cubic yards of clay muddle, which forms the bottom, and which is carried up in a wall through the center of the embankment. About 7,000 yards of concrete were used in the bottom, and also under the foundation of the center wall. The capacity of the reservoir is estimated at 50,000,000 gallons. The earth work amounted to 300,000 cubic yards. A grand celebration of the completion of the work is in perspective as we go to press. There are several hundred of well citizens present, and every prominent or well-known man has been invited to attend. Among those invited by the builders to give the work their inspection, were the Board of Water Commissioners, the Merchants' Exchange, the Board of Trade, the City Council, the County Court, the Press, &c. The work will receive a careful scrutiny, after which a bountiful feast will be in order. That the latter will be a success it is needless to say, but as an illustration of the gastric proportions we may say that there are one thousand bottles of wine and a load of ice on the premises. Mr. George Milford, of the firm of Milford & Boyle, is setting the lunch, and we saw four wagon-loads of provisions leave his place this afternoon.

Fearful Scene at a Ball—Two Men Stabbed by a Desperado.

From the Cincinnati Commercial, July 18.

L. Fehrmann, a saloon-keeper on Ludlow-avenue, near Eberhardt's distillery, in Camptownville, has recently had a two-story frame house put up adjoining his saloon. On Saturday evening, the floor being laid, it was arranged that the prospective beer saloon should be dedicated in the usual manner by having a dance, accompanied by the usual quantity of beer. Everything went along smoothly, all participating in the festivities without any disagreeable interruptions. Toward 1 o'clock, two or three individuals—Otto Dirr, Peter Leuhoff and another—grew tired of the German dances, and seemed determined to stop the ladies from waltzing by getting in the middle of the floor and persisting in introducing quadrilles. Fahrmann, Peter Eberhardt and Fritz Bruckmann (of the brewery firm of Bruckmann & Fox) attempted to expostulate with the trio, and informed them that as soon as the waltz was over they should have their quadrilles, &c. But they were in the mood to listen to no reason, and insisted that they must have an American dance right off. Fritz Bruckmann, and employe of the Ludlow-avenue Brewery, then attempted to persuade the noisy fellows to wait awhile, when Otto Dirr drew a knife and made a savage thrust at him. Bruckmann retreated toward the door, and by so doing no doubt saved his life. As he received third cut in one of his ribs, he had been turned round, and with a desperate effort launched the six-inch blade into Bruckmann's back, below the left shoulder-blade, and in the thrust turned the knife entirely round, making a frightful wound. Dirr then assaulted Dietzer with the knife, inflicting six flesh-wounds in the back, leading one in the small of the back, more serious than all the rest. Dietzer also received a severe cut over the right eye, and one under the eye. The dance broke up as soon as the disturbance occurred, and Dirr sided off toward his boarding-house, knife in hand, threatening to use it on any one who should attempt to arrest him. After allowing him sufficient time to get into bed, the Camptownville night Police were hunted up, three of whom went forthwith to Val. Nicholas' place on the Avenue, nearly opposite the Mayor's Office, where he was found ensconced in bed, and the knife with him, partly covered with blood. He made no resistance, and was accordingly marched over to the Station-house and locked up.

Embargoed Property of Cubans—The Insurrection in the Camaguey—Persecutions of the Insurgents—Central Plantations—Spanish Republicanism—War News—More Executions—Miscellaneous.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, July 16, 1870.

The Gaceta is now publishing a list of all embargoed property belonging to Cubans who are working with their "intelligence, valor or tongue," against the power of Spain in Cuba. It makes no difference to the Government whether the embargoed individual is a member of the Junta, a soldier of the Cuban army, or an inoffensive individual with a strong pair of lungs and a glib tongue. All is grist that comes to the mill. Any report compromising any Cuban absent from the island is eagerly given credence to, and his property ordered to be seized. Fully one-half of those whose names appear in the Gaceta as having their property seized, are only the happy possessors of what they carry on their backs or in their pockets, and as the seizure of articles where none existed, was only a waste of writing and printing paper, and at the same time served admirably as an amusement to the Cubans, the Government changed its line of tactics in that quarter. A large number of estates were heavily involved, and the creditors, who are nearly all adherents of the Spanish cause, have not been able to collect a dollar of what the absent planter, or, rather, the estate owed; consequently, the embargoed party has not been the Cuban planter, who promenades Broadway, but the very loyal Spaniard, who shoulders the musket as a volunteer and hurrahs for Spain, casting a longing glance at the warehouses where his creditors' sugars are stored, and which would principally have belonged to him, had the Government not interfered. Thus virtue brings its own reward. It is stated, however, that the Government will take some steps to pay the creditors a portion of the money realized, after deducting the working and other expenses of the plantation; this, however, although appearing a mere drop in the bucket, will be in reality like so much money found, as not a single embarrassed planter will be able to liquidate his indebtedness for many years to come, owing to the abolition of slavery, consequent loss of laborers, decrease in the production and the natural effects of the war, irrespective of the heavy taxes and the maintenance of an armed force—which is the case on most plantations—to save the owners or overseers from being gobbled up by insurgents or robbed by some of the innumerable and countless bands of highwaymen existing all over the country. As a sample of indebtedness, I cite the case of one planter, Mr. O——, who owes Mr. JOSE MARIAMORALES, formerly the wealthiest merchant in the island, no less a sum than $749,000; as an example of a highwayman's charge on a plantation not thirty miles from Havana, recently a band entered the place in broad daylight, called the owner out and asked and received money, clothing and provisions; the owner and administrator treated the leader with the utmost politeness recognized by hidalgo etiquette. And this followed: The Capitan de Partido arrived at the plantation with an armed force a few minutes after the highwaymen left, the dust raised by their horses' hoofs being plainly visible; the courage of the Capitan and his party rose to the highest pitch; they brandished their swords, shook their fists at the retiring highwaymen, looked terribly ferocious, carefully inspected their arms, mounted in a hurry and then went for the highwaymen—by riding off in a contrary direction. Strange to say no mention of this heroic feat was mentioned by the Press, not even, as customary, about two months after it happened.

THE CAMAGUEY.

Gen. RODAS has stated that the insurrection of the Camaguey has been reduced to the smallest proportions, and that not a single leader has a hundred men together. If the statement of a Spanish officer just arrived from that region is true, the report of RODAS is, to say it mildly, very problematical. The officer states that many sections of the Camaguey have been so thoroughly overrun and searched by the troops that not a single insurgent has been seen for weeks—but that they were not killed but simply disappeared from their old stamping grounds to appear on a new one. Also that 10,000 soldiers could keep the surroundings of Puerto Principe and other towns, and the line of the Nuevitas Railroad free from insurgents, and make raids where and whenever they pleased throughout the district, in bands not exceeding 100 men; but that double that number would not be able to end the rebellion completely. "But the insurgents don't know how to fight," I said, "and they never stand a bayonet attack of the regulars." "They may not fight in the streets of Havana, or in the newspapers," I was answered, "but they manage to kill people; if you don't believe that they fight, join some centra guerillas, and you will soon be convinced. Undoubtedly the majority run after firing a volley, but they are not alike. BERRETA gave me my hands full, and if I had been with less trusty men, and in any other than the advantageous position I occupied, it is very probable that I should not be here today to tell the tale." The Cuban army in the Camaguey, which consisted last year of nearly 12,000 men, does not now number 2,000 all told, and the Spanish army has decreased from 6,000 to 4,000. From reliable sources I learn that the organization of volunteer companies, formed by ex-insurgents, is progressing rapidly; the first company of volunteers at Guaimaro has already received its armament, and the second is ready to receive theirs. The arms captured from the Lopez expeditions are dealt out to these volunteers, and the general impression is that the members will fight against their countrymen to the last, not out of any particular love they have for the Spaniards, but out of fear of the treatment they would receive from their late companions should they fall into their hands.

CENTRAL PLANTATIONS.

RODAS is also encouraging the scheme, which has already been put into operation, of establishing large plantations or settlements, situated midways between some Spanish forts, and in convenient supporting distance in case of an attack. These lands are given to these settlers as a present by the Government, and in addition they receive seeds, agricultural implements and oxen. The plan is a good one, but it will not work; too many projects of the same nature having been tried and abandoned, for the simple reason that the so-called presentados, or persons proceeding from insurgent land, take the oxen and seeds, work for a few weeks, eat Government rations in the meanwhile, and then, in accordance with the customs of the country, become tired, and leave off work, though they continue to receive food and Government rations. They argue that they have placed themselves under the protection of the Government, and have a right to receive them. They look on the Government as their employer pay them, and vice versa. It is all right.

SPANISH REPUBLICANISM.

The question of an approaching war in Spain, on account of a poor German Prince, who, never believe, joined the list of other poor Princes that annoyed the Spanish crown, is still creating considerable stir here. This King question is a very ticklish one, and some of the articles in the Spanish journals on it are surely quite amusing. The great defender of the Pretender Don CARLOS and of the Pope, the Pensamiento Español, says, "If CHARLES VII. was King, he would be a defender and a Christian King." The Gil Blas takes up the cudgels and answers sarcastically:

"If we thought such a thing could happen, we should be very glad. A Christian King we have already seen. For example, CHARLES X. of France, was a Christian King, he spoiled himself on St. Bartholomew's Day, he expelled his subjects from the palace windows, and Philip II., with all due solemnity, was also a Christian King, and dealt out justice, assassinating his own subjects. Christian Kings we may look head to foot, and above and below that, CHARLES II., III. and IV., FERDINAND VII., and other members of the same style. This is to prove that we all know more or less, what a Christian King may do. But a decent King really gives us a certain anxiety to know what it would be like, as we have never heard of a decent King, and none have ever been seen.

Speaking of Prince ALFONSO, the Gil Blas says:

"The enemies of the polished youth don't tire of persecuting him; first they sold his picture, and will wind up by selling him if they can only find a purchaser. And now an author has invented his history. Poor young one, so young, and he has already a history."

The sarcasm is apparent as the Prince is only fourteen years of age, and reported to be very stupid. Referring to Cuba, Gil Blas says:

"Satisfactory news from Cuba. The revolution is drawing to a close. This drawing to a close continues. It is also noteworthy that the killed and surrendered insurgents are larger in numbers than the entire population of Cuba. What a way to kill people."

Thus even Spanish journals are making fun over the reports from Cuba, and as they don't hear the other side of the story, they are perfectly right in criticising. Gil Blas ought to read some of the New-York papers if he wishes to be posted and up to time.

WAR NEWS.

Skirmishes continue all over the island, but with the exception of some encounters near Sancti Spiritus, where the insurgent Gen. MARIOS GARCIA operates with about one thousand men, nothing of any importance is taking place. VALMASEDA was compelled to leave for Santiago de Cuba and infuse some life into military matters. MORELLO, the commander at Santiago, generally known by the name of Morellito, on account of his diminutive body and brain, did not know what to do, although he had the advice of Gen. DETRESTE, a Frenchman commanding a Spanish division. A very remarkable fact has to be observed, namely, that the best fighting and administrative generals in the Spanish Army are natives of Cuba—AMPUDIA, the General of Bayamo, Tiguani and Manzanillo, and Gen. FERRER, of Holguin. One-half of the commanders of the gun-boats are also born on the island. Among the persons killed by MONTANER in his last march from Vera Cruz to Puerto Principe was CARLOS LOIN, an uncle of Ex-Gen. QUESADA, and one of his sons. A son of the Marquis of SANTA ANA and SANTA MARIA, Mr. JUAN C. AGUILERA, who had been captured by the troops some time ago, was executed in Puerto Principe on the 30th ult., and MANUEL LARA on the 8th. The Captain-General pardoned nine insurgents sentenced to death, instead of nineteen, as had been originally stated.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Messrs. LAWTON & CO., of this city, have secured the contract for carrying the United States mails from New-Orleans to Havana via the Florida coast. It is to be hoped that they will employ steamers which make the trip in less than from nine to twenty days—the schedule time of the present line. If the Cedar Keys Railroad and its connections are once placed on a decent footing, there is no doubt but that most of the passenger traffic with the United States will take that route as the shortest and most comfortable ..... Sir CHARLES BRIGHT, of the West India and Panama Cable Company, has been in town for a couple of days, and returned yesterday to Batabano to superintend the immediate laying of the cable between that place and Jamaica via Santiago de Cuba. The revenue of the Government derived from taxes, duties, &c., for the first eight months exceeds that of the corresponding period of the previous year by $1,242,324, being an increase of over 30 per cent.... The frigate Almansa has been repaired, the escape-valve replaced and the vessel is again fit for service. The heat for the past fourteen days has been oppressive, and not a drop of rain has fallen, although we are in the rainy season.... Mr. BIDDLE, the American Consul-General, has been seriously ill with yellow fever, but is now improving. His wife, Mrs. BIDDLE, is also ill and not expected to recover. A consultation of five physicians held yesterday report her case to be very critical. Mr. and Mrs. BIDDLE are Philadelphians, and they have the sympathies of the entire population. The children of the BIDDLES are being cared for by some friends. QUASIMODO.

THE HEAT.

The Temperature Moderated—Range of the Thermometer—More Casualties and Deaths.

There was a very material reduction in the temperature yesterday, and the weather was such as to be not only comparatively agreeable in itself, but to inspire the hope that the second series of torrid days of the present Summer has come to an end. There was at least an interregnum, and for even a temporary relief overburdened humanity was duly grateful. But the evil the heat did lived after it, as will be seen from the following list of casualties of the day:
